British Ask Soviet Help Only in Case They Fight

Chamberlain Tells Commons What His Proposals Included; Seeks to Allay Fears

English Policy

By Ralph W. Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, May 10.—Asserting that the British government regards the negotiations to bring Soviet Russia into the Anglo-French "peace front" as "of greatest importance and very urgent," Prime Minister Chamberlain gave for the first time today in the House of Commons a detailed explanation of the British proposals to this end, which fall short of Moscow's desire for an outright Anglo-French-Soviet alliance.

The prime minister also foreshadowed by implication an announcement "very soon" that Turkey had joined the "peace front," presumably under the mutual aid arrangements with Britain and France.

Expressing the view that there was apparently a "misunderstanding" in Moscow over the British plan, Chamberlain explained that his government has asked the Soviets to announce readiness "to lend assistance, if desired," in case Britain and France were to become involved in hostilities in discharge of their obligations—apparently those under the defense alliance with Poland and the unilateral guarantees to Rumania.

No Objection to Proviso

"In particular," he added, "His Majesty's government made it plain that it was no part of their intention that the Soviet government should commit themselves to intervene irrespective of whether Great Britain and France had already done so in discharge of their obligations.

"His Majesty's government added that if the Soviet government wished to make their own intervention contingent on that of Great Britain and France, His Majesty's government, on their part, would have no objection."

The prime minister also said that yesterday Ivan Maisky, the Soviet ambassador to London, was asked to provide the "precise grounds" on which Soviet doubts were based, and was assured that "if there were any room for doubt it would be removed without difficulty."

Reply Awaited

When Maj. Clement Attlee, Labor leader, urged that Lord Halifax be dispatched to Moscow to negotiate directly, Chamberlain said he thought it best "to await the reply of the Soviet government to see what further steps are required."

The Soviet communique complained there was no mention of a reciprocal undertaking by Britain or France.

Despite Chamberlain's statement, however, doubts persisted in some quarters that the Soviet Union would accept the British proposals for a security pact without further specific guarantees.

In Moscow it was observed that British and French pledges to Poland and Rumania have lessened considerably Russia's need for an alliance in the west.

Oumansky Is Named Soviet Ambassador

Underwood & Underwood.

Constantine Oumansky, his wife and daughter, Nina

Brisk, American-talking Constantine Alexandrovitch Oumansky, Charge d'Affaires at the Soviet Embassy, friend of Maxim Litvinoff, and a prime mover in the negotiations that resumed American-Russian diplomatic relations, became Ambassador from the U. S. S. R. to the United States yesterday.

Oumansky, who since June 22, 1938, has been Charge d'Affaires ad interim, was looked upon here as the most likely successor to Alexander Troyanovsky, who returned home last June.

The new Ambassador, who will become 37 years old Sunday, said he would make no announcements until his credentials have been presented to the President. He did not say when he would call at the White House.

Oumansky's appointment was announced by the office of Premier V. M. Molotoff, Soviet comissar for foreign affairs. Molotoff has held his position since last week, when Maxim Litvinoff was relieved.

Oumansky came first to the United States in November, 1933, with Litvinoff to seek resumption of normal diplomatic relations between the two countries. When the talks were satisfactorily concluded, he remained here for several weeks going to Florida and later inspecting American industry in Detroit

Bolivia Barters Oil, Minerals With Germany

Receives Credit for 4,000,000 Marks In Manufactures

By the Associated Press.

La Paz, Bolivia, May 10.—Bolivia has arranged for the barter of oil and other raw materials for 4,000,000 marks of German manufactures, the minister of mines, Dionisio Foyanini, announced today.

The government took over ownership and operation of Bolivian oil fields after canceling a Standard Oil concession March 13, 1937.

Foyanini said Bolivia, "since August, 1938, had been negotiating for compensation mark credits with various German firms through the Credit Anschlaff in exchange for Bolivian minerals, hides and some petroleum. On February 2, 1939, Bolivia was granted the credit of 4,000,000 marks."

The nominal value of the mark is 40 cents, but in barter arrangements its value varies.)

The minister said the credit obtained in Germany would be used "in accordance with the necessities of the Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales (the government oil company)"

He said Walther Mohring, Buenos Aires representative of the government company, now was in Berlin in connection with the exchange of products.

German Says Next War Will Spare Civilians

Fighting Will Be on Battlefield Only, Military Doctors Told

The next war will be fought on battlefields, rather than civilian populations' being the objective of enemy guns and bombs, a young German surgeon said yesterday at the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy.

The speaker was Maj. Bruno Brandi, who was a teen-age artilleryman in the World War and who now directs a military surgical hospital in Ulm, Germany.

Addresses by Maj. Brandi and Col. Albert G. Love, U. S. Medical Corps, on probable casualties in wartime featured the second day of scientific sessions, together with an illustrated report by Gen. Aldo Castellani, of Italy, on medical aspects of the Ethiopian conquest.

Gen. Castellani, who may have saved Mussolini's life about 12 years ago when he advised against an operation on the premier, with subsequent vindication, reported that routine use of quinine kept the malaria toll to a minimum in Ethiopia, "though many of the soldiers were inclined to credit red wine."

Malaria, scurvy, beri beri, dysentery, typhus, plague and cholera were virtually unknown among the Italian expeditionary forces, said

G-Men Find China's Throne—Sent to Wrong World Fair City

By International News Service.

New York, May 10.—Misaddressed to California instead of New York by an "absent-minded professor" in Holland, the gold and teak imperial throne of China was found by G-men late today after being reported missing by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr.

Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt had arranged to have the throne, actually priceless but valued for insurance purposes at $2,000,000, shipped here with its million-dollar pagoda for exhibition to raise funds for Chinese war orphans.

The pagoda, correctly addressed, was claimed at the custom house today, but the throne could not be found. Mrs. Roosevelt appealed for Federal aid.

Throne and pagoda had been reported shipped on the liner Zaandam by Dr. Fritz Loew-Burr, of Amsterdam. After hours of search, the G-men found the throne in a crate addressed to Prof. Otto Muncheon, Okland, Calif. Dr. Loew-Burr, curator of the Amsterdam Museum, had addressed it by mistake to his old friend, Prof. Muchen.

Miners Balk At Operators' 'Last' Offer

Only Closed Shop Demand Blocks Peace; Old Wage Scale Acceptable

New York (Thursday), May 11 (AP).—A spokesman for the bituminous operators announced early today the United Mine Workers had rejected their "last proposal" for reopening the soft coal mines of 26 States.

The announced breakdown of negotiations came after joint and separate sessions of the C. I. O. miners union and the operators who renewed their meetings at the demand of President Roosevelt in the face of an industrial fuel famine.

"Up to Miners"

"It's now up to the miners," said a spokesman for the operators. "Negotiations are being continued."

The spokesman said the only new offer in the operators' final proposal was to reopen the mines, as the President requested.

Previously, John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, declared he had proposed returning to work four times but had been rebuffed by the mine owners.

The operators' spokesman said the conferees had come to terms on every point except the U. M. W. A. Demand for a "union shop."

R. L. Ireland, the operators' spokesman, said the operators had proposed immediate resumption of the operations stopped at the expiration of the old contract last March 31, when nearly a half million miners stopped work.

He said the operators had sought an agreement for resumption at the wage and hour scale of the expired contract.

"In a last effort to bring about a settlement, the operators made the following proposal," the operators' statement said:

"The mines will resume operations immediately.

Change in Contract

"The rates of pay, hours of work and conditions of employment that obtained in the Appalachian agreements which expired March 31, 1939, and all the customs and practices thereunder shall be continued until March 31, 1941, except as modified below:

The old contract shall be changed to conform to recognition of the U. M. W. as the exclusive bargaining representative for all the employes of all the classes covered by the Appalachian conference and its component district associations shall be established as the proper bargaining unit under the National Labor Relations Act.

"That negotiations continue for the purpose of finding some formula agreeable to both parties which will preserve the integrity of the agreement and of the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America from attacks made under the provisions of the national labor relations act, the parties agreeing that they will if necessary jointly support emergency legislation designed to accomplish this purpose.

"This proposal was rejected by the miners."

After the issuance of the statement, the conferees sat down to eat,

Murphy Expected To Put Amlie in His Department

Attorney General Murphy is expected to announce today the appointment of former Representative Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, a member of the department legal field staff handling land cases in the Wisconsin area.

Amlie, whose appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission was withdrawn recently by President Roosevelt when a Senate fight threatened on his confirmation, will be one of about 50 field attorneys handling land cases.

The salary range for such attorneys is from $3,000 to $8,000 or $7,000 annually. Amlie, it is expected, will receive a salary somewhere in between.

Baltimore Firm Robbed of $1,500

Baltimore, May 10 (INS).—Believed to be members of a gang which shot and killed a watchman during a holdup at Richmond, Va., four armed bandits today held up the office of the Bugle Coat & Apron Co. here, bound and gagged four employes, and escaped with $1,500. The bandits are also suspected of having cracked a number of safes in Washington.

King, Queen Meet Crew; Antiaircraft Gunners Perform

Aboard Empress of Australia, May 10 (Canadian Press).—King George had an opportunity today to observe the efficiency of his gunners as calmer seas brought smoother sailing for the Empress of Australia, carrying the King and Queen Elizabeth to North America.

The convoying cruiser Southampton fired a smoke shell which exploded high in the air. Then the cruiser's antiaircraft guns peppered the smoke with white spots, indicating hits.

Members of the Empress' crew were introduced to their King and Queen in a brief ceremony at noon.

Army Plane Falls In Chesapeake Bay

An Army amphibian plane from Bolling Field, piloted by Lieut. H. W. Regan and carrying four passengers, crashed in Chesapeake Bay between Cedar Point and No Point, Md., yesterday. One passenger was reported slightly injured.

Rescued by Capt. Beall Groom, of the oyster schooner Thomas F. Judd, they were taken to Bowen's Inn at Solomon's Island, Md.

Favorites Got WPA Lakes, Inquiry Told

Ex-Sen. Berry and Gov. Cooper Were Benefited by Projects, Tennesseean Charges

Former Senator George L. Berry, Governor Prentice Cooper and other politically prominent Tennesseans benefited from WPA construction of lakes built "primarily" to enhance real estate values, the House subcommittee investigating the WPA was told yesterday.

Harry S. Barger, committee investigator, presented a statement of Eugene R. Kuhne, of the Tennessee Fish and Game Commission, declaring that "lakes have been built without reference to the need for recreational facilities considered on a State-wide or community basis."

Barger testified that Col. H. S. Berry, WPA Administrator for Tennessee (and no relation to the ex-Senator), had told him the WPA had spent $86,315.43 for a lake at the Pressmen's Home, operated by the International Union of Printing Pressmen, of which former Senator Berry is head. The administrator was also quoted as saying Berry claimed he had contributed $36,516 toward the project.

"In Thinly Populated Section"

In Kuhne's statement, Pressmen's Home Lake is described as "located in a thinly populated section of the State. This region is served, insofar as fishing, boating and swimming are concerned, by Norris Reservoir, Upper Clinch River and Holston River."

Other beneficiaries from WPA lakes, as listed in Kuhne's statement, included Marshall Priest, former State comptroller, and John Harton, State treasurer.

Kuhne said in the statement that "in each and every instance, the State has been deeded the actual reservoir site to water level plus a strip of land 100 feet wide, completely surrounding the lake."

"Lands owned by private individuals, just back of the State land are being plotted or sold for cottage sites or are being used for the erection of private, commercial or recreational facilities," Kuhne asserted.

Kuhne added that he did not know "for a fact" that Gov. Cooper was the owner of land near one of the lakes, "but the lake was planned entirely upon his determined insistence, after having first been rejected by the commissioners of conservation."

"The Facts As I See Them"

The statement included the declaration that it did not constitute "a charge against the WPA nor against the Department of Conservation or against any of the politicians whose influence has shaped and directed the course of lake construction in Tennessee. It is merely a statement of the facts as I see them."

Barger testified that Army engineers reported the dam at Pressman's Home might break as a result of heavy rain. Kuhne alleged in his statement that another of the lakes, said to benefit the C. M. Wrenne Realty Co., of Nashville, had already cost the WPA and the State about $250,000, or $4,000 per acre.

Barger said that some Tennessee counties which had been credited with making sizable contributions toward WPA projects were financially unable to have spent the sums attributed to them.

Cotton Subsidy Killed In Senate; House Adds 50 Million for Rivers

Representatives Vote Waterways Funds Despite Reported Roosevelt Opposition

Despite opposition of the Democratic leadership, the House yesterday voted an appropriation for flood control and river and harbor projects $50,000,000 higher than the original budget estimate, with the understanding that the increase would be deducted from the forthcoming relief bill.

A last minute move by Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, blocked final passage of the $305,188,514 bill, which provides for all civil functions of the War Department. The measure now stands $66,040,647 above this year's appropriation.

House approval of the extra $50,000,000 to be divided between river and harbor and flood control work came on close roll call votes on amendments introduced by Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi. The additional grant for river and harbor projects was indorsed, 171 to 165, while extra funds for flood control received a vote of 182 ot 155.

Increase Stricken Once

The proposal to vote the extra $50,000,000 in spite of budget estimates was approved by the War Department appropriations sub-committee, headed by Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; but after a heated fight, the full Appropriations Committee struck out the increase yesterday morning. So prolonged was the argument that the committee was unprepared to report out the bill when the House met, so the House was forced into recess until the bill could be whipped into shape.

Proponents of the additional $50,000,000 pointed out that a similar sum has been allotted regularly from the annual relief appropriations bill for flood control and river and harbor improvements. By voting the increase in the War Department bill and deducting it from the relief bill, the taxpayer would suffer no net loss, they argued.

However, Majority Leader Rayburn asserted on the floor that President Roosevelt had authorized him to say that $50,000,000 would be allocated from 1940 relief funds for river and harbor improvements and flood control, but that he did not wish the present bill to be augmented.

Curb on President

However, some conservative Congressmen fighting the measure said privately they hoped the 1940 relief bill would be worded to tie the hands of the President, preventing him from following his custom of past years of allocating relief money for rivers, harbors and flood control work.

Members from the large cities who voted for the increased appropriation were taunted by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, for "overriding the budget estimates, further increasing the public deficit and disregarding the wishes of the President."

Woodrum asserted that "the avowed purpose" of the bill "is to take money out of the relief bill that comes later and turn it over to river and harbor improvements." He asserted that "a great many members of Congress" believe that "the money Congress votes for relief should be tied down so it will be spent for relief."

If it is true that the Administration approves of the extra $50,000,000 for flood control and rivers and harbors, said Woodrum, "why is it not legislatively honest to have a budget estimate for it and put it in the bill in the regular way and not have a spendthrift Congress held up to the country as overriding the

President Hits Totalitarians As Art Stiflers

Regimentation Assailed In Speech Dedicating New York Museum

President Roosevelt last night attacked the regimented life of totalitarian countries in a Nation-wide radio address dedicating the new building of the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Without referring specifically to the dictator countries, he said there could be no vitality in art unless "the right of spontaneous life" existed in the social structure.

"A world turned into a stereotype," he declared, "a society converted into a regiment, a life translated into a routine, make it difficult for either art or artists to survive. Crush individuality in society and you crush art as well. Nourish the conditions of a free life and you nourish the arts, too."

Art for All Stressed

The President emphasized the need for making the public, particularly in the small towns remote from cultural centers, better acquainted with modern art.

He pointed to "the great Treasury projects, through which our public buildings are being decorated," and the Federal art project of the Works Progress Administration, as examples of the tradition that "art in America has always belonged to the people and never has been the property of an academy or a class."

"The WPA artist," he declared, "emphasizes with great force the essential place which the arts have in a democratic society such as ours."

Export Aid Rejected; Woodrum Maps War On $372,000,000 Tacked to Farm Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate yesterday overwhelmingly refused to suspend its rules to make way for an Administration-sponsored cotton export subsidy rider on its record-breaking $1,218,000,000 farm appropriation bill.

A motion by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, failed 37 to 36, far short of the two-thirds majority required.

Opponents of subsidized exports followed up their victory by asking revival of the Smith cotton bill, providing direct subsidies to farmers instead of to exporters.

Economy Bloc Acts

As the farm bill neared passage, the $372,000,000 over budget estimates already voted by the Senate brought a plea for defeat from leaders of the House economy bloc and another deficit warning from the Treasury.

Backing the President's admonition against deficit appropriations, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, leader of the successful House fight against parity price benefits, called for Administration aid in rejecting the increases when the bill returns to the House.

Treasury officials pointed out that the $372,000,000 Senate farm bill increase would crowd the legal debt limit close to the $45,000,000,000 ceiling for the next fiscal year. Proposals to increase the debt limit had met sharp opposition at the Capitol, and the Administration had ceased pressure for upward revision this session.

Subsidy Power Remains

Senate defeat yesterday of the Bankhead proposal to subsidize export of new crop cotton and manufactures left the Administration still with limited authority to proceed with its own cotton export plans. The bill makes $203,000,000 available for farm surplus removals, and it was pointed out the Administration could use 25 per cent of this, or about $50,000,000, for expediting cotton sales abroad.

To stalemate such an effort, export subsidy opponents, led by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, were considering two moves. First, George may ask the Senate to write a definite prohibition against cotton export subsidies into the farm bill. Second, he said he will move to call up the Smith bill, which directs that 3 cents a pound be paid directly to cotton farmers who agree not to seek new cotton loans.

Indorsed by President

Both the President and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had indorsed a cotton export program which would have paid 2 cents a pound subsidy to exporters of cotton from the Government's 11,250,000-bale cotton-loan stores.

As a "compromise," acceptable to Wallace, Bankhead had proposed that foreign sales of new crop cotton and manufactures only be subsidized, and the vast Government loan cotton stores remain "frozen."

Split wide open on the cotton surplus dilemma, members of the South's cotton bloc quarreled before the decisive vote. On opposing sides were George and Russell, both of Georgia. Debate turned bitter and personal, as Connally (Democrat), of Texas, lashed Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Smith retorted in kind.

Admitted "Stop Gap"

Connally admitted the export subsidy plan was a "stop gap," but declared Smith and other export subsidy opponents were proposing to "do nothing but let American cotton pile up in warehouses." He

'Methodists Are One People;' 10,000 Witness Unification

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 10.—In worshipful ceremony the Methodist Church was proclaimed one united body tonight by the 900 delegates and 56 bishops who have spent two weeks in perfecting its government.

"The Methodists are one people."

That was the key phrase repeated time after time by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, in the service symbolically sealing the schisms which have divided the American followers of John Wesley for more than a century.

Bishop Hughes

Ten thousand persons watched the ceremony climaxing 23 years of unification work by bringing the 8,000,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church into one organization.

Evrey delegate and bishop rose with raised hand as Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, put the final motion for approval of the plan of

God Urged Son's Slaying, Says Father

Imbecile Chloroformed 'To End Suffering,' N. Y. Court Told

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—A middle-aged father sobbed in Bronx County Court today that he killed his 16-year-old imbecile son because he couldn't bear to see him suffering and "I didn't want to see him kicked around."

Grief shook the rugged shoulders of Louis Greenfield, a graying business man, as he told of chloroforming the boy, Jerome, "whom I loved more than anything else in the world."

Greenfield is charged with manslaughter.

"It was the best thing for him . . . It was the will of God . . . At night in bed, an unknown voice kept telling me to stop his suffering—to stop his suffering. I would get up to see if Jerry was breathing. I could not sleep."

He told how his son was subject to spasms, and would brush his hand across his forehead as though in pain; how he could not walk as a child of 8, but "just lay there like a lump of pudding."

"I didn't want to see the boy suffer any more than he had.

"I knew that when my wife and I died there would be no one to look out for him. . . . I knew it was against the law of man, but not against the law of God. I didn't want to do it, but God urged me to stop his suffering. The law of God is mightier than the law of man."

Both sides rested soon after the father finished his story. The case may go to the jury late tomorrow.

Sometimes, Greenfield said, he and his wife discussed the idea of suicide, and once she said they should all die together.

They had sent the boy to an institution for a while, "but he was the kind of boy who grieves for his parents," and they brought him home.

Struggling for composure, Greenfield retraced the 16 years in which they tried without avail to find a cure for the boy. He told of their longing for a son, their pride in the baby, the gradual realization of his condition and the doctors' pronouncement that he would be a hopeless imbecile for life.

A few months before he killed his son, he said, he saw a motion picture about a feeble-minded boy who was led to criminal activities.

"I thought that some day something like that would happen to Jerry. After that the more I looked at Jerry the more he looked like the boy in the movie. I knew there would be no one to look out for him when we were gone."

Methodist Union Becomes Reality

union. No one stood on the call for opposition votes.

"We do so declare," chanted the delegates in unison, as Bishop Moore read:

"The Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church are and shall be one united church."

The chant was repeated as he read the five formal sections of the declarations of union.

The entire delegation joined with the bishops in pledging:

"To the Methodist Church thus established we do solemnly declare our allegiance, and upon all its life and service we do reverently invoke the blessing of Almighty God. Amen."

Bishop A. Frank Smith, of Houston, Tex., led the meeting in the formal "hallowing of worship," closing with all joining in the declaration:

"We do here and now consecrate the Methodist Church to the worship of God and the establishment of His Kingdom among men everywhere through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen."

In closing business sessions today the conference adopted a peace resolution recognizing "honest difference of opinion" on peace measures and defeated by the closest vote of any session a proposal to grant women full clergy rights.

The peace resolution merely pledged the church to "undivided opposition to the spirit of war;" to "exert every possible influence" for peaceful settlement of international differences; to urge Congress and the President to "take every possible step to avoid the entanglement" of this Nation in war, and to provide for peace education of children.

The conference also pledged allegiance of the new church to the Federal Government.

Delegates turned down the plan of full clergy rights for women by 384 to 371.

United the 7,856,060 members of the three old churches.

Officially saw the end of the 111-year-old opposition of the Methodist Protestant church to the Episcopal form of government when delegates of that branch chose two bishops.

Healed the rift which split the Episcopal church into North and South divisions in 1844 by setting up the separate jurisdiction for colored congregations.

Harmonized the disciplines of the three churches, taking parts from each but adding nothing not included previously in one of them.

Liberalized divorce rules of the Protestant and South branches by permitting ministers to solemnize marriages of "innocent parties" to divorces resulting from mental and physical cruelty.

Adopted an advance "social creed" pledging support to social security, the right of labor to organize, farmers' rights, abolition of child labor and giving support of the church to those members who are "conscientious objectors" to war.

Set up central boards for finance, missions, education, temperance, pensions, hospitals, lay activities and publications.

Capital Clergymen Applaud Unification of Methodists

Formal unification of the three main branches of Methodism last night in Kansas City, which makes it the strongest organized Protestant body in the world, drew comment from local ecclesiastical circles.

In the new setup, which will be known simply as the Methodist Church, Washington will become a unit of the new Northeastern jurisdiction, of which Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes is one of the bishops, and will embrace churches in Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and the New England States. Methodist churches on the Virginia side of the Potomac will function under the new Southeastern Conference, also to include West Virginia, North and South Carolina and nearby States.

Discussing the historic move, which will place 8,000,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Protestant and Southern Methodist churches under one organization, to be known simply as the Methodist Church, and which will result in a combined Methodist membership of 47,000 in the Washington area, Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, said:

"The Methodist union will greatly strengthen the Methodist enterprise in Washington, and I hope it will advance union in other bodies. It will require some years to work out the details but the results will be satisfactory. Some mergers and relocations will be necessary, but these can be affected in due time."

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church and president of the Washington Federation of Churches:

"We all rejoice in the decision the Methodists have made and hope that it will lead the way to a similar union of other bodies."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington:

"The union is a magnificent thing, in keeping with the spirit of the age, and is a great step forward:

The Rev. William Andrew Keese, pastor of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, on American University campus:

"I accept the union of the three branches of Methodism with gratitude and deep humility, realizing that the formation of the largest Protestant Church in America carries with it a tremendous challenge that our moral and spiritual strength shall measure up to our numerical strength.

"Locally there will be many practical problems to be solved, but if we have the warm hearts and cool heads that characterized the uniting conference I am confident that they can be worked out."

Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church: "Unification should prove a source of strength not only to the cause of American Methodism, but to the whole Christian enterprise in the United States."

wishes of the President of the United States?"

One member pointed out that the basic cause of the row over the $50,000,000 rests in the fact that this is the first time in three years that the War Department civil appropriations bill has been taken up prior to the relief bill. Members wanted to be certain, he said, that the usual allotment of relief funds for river and harbor and flood control projects would be made.

Including the extra $50,000,000, the War Department bill now provides $172,000,000 for flood control (of which $39,000,000 is for the Mississippi River) and $98,000,000 for river and harbor improvements; the work to be carried out by the Army Corps of Engineers, and $24,774,924 for the Panama Canal.

Guerrillas Still Active in Ethiopia

Rome, May 10 (U.P.).—Attilio Teruzzi, Italian secretary of colonies, told the Chamber of Deputies tonight that guerrilla warfare was continuing in Ethiopia and that the rebels "thrive through foreign propaganda and financial help."

Teruzzi's statement was made during discussion of Italy's $99,774,983 colonial budget for 1939-1940, an increase of nearly $3,895,000 over the current budget, which was passed unanimously by the deputies.

Poison Ring's Branch Slew 3 In Pittsburgh

24 Suspects Are Brought Together For Mass Grilling

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 10.—Another branch office of Philadelphia's murder-for-profit syndicate was reported found today in Pittsburgh, through which the killers handled their western Pennsylvania business with the same high-pressure methods they found so lucrative in this section, New Jersey and perhaps other States.

Detectives took the new development in stride, feeling it merely added magnitude to the known operations by which the syndicate enriched itself, seducing dissatisfied wives to husband-murder with promises of insurance profits and more satisfactory mates.

Investigators tonight brought together virtually all of the 24 prisoners in custody for a mass inquisition, through which it was hoped to obtain additional confessions.

Meantime, it was disclosed that secret warrants had been issued for nine more persons in connection with additional murders which brought the total of identified victims to more than 40.

An inkling that the ring may at least once have gone in for murder of a prominent man for a big quick profit, instead of its customary collection of small insurance policies, was seen in the report that a Hartford, Conn., insurance company was suspicious of the 1935 death of a wealthy business man, listed previously as accidental. The compnay paid a benefit of more than $100,000 in the instance because the policy was one of double indemnity for accidental death.

Lack of laboratory facilities and chemists for analysis of vital organs delayed exhumation of bodies today, but District Attorney Charles F. Kelley ordered police laboratory workers to extra shifts of day and night duty.

Many Turn Informer

Trials are scheduled to start May 22, and are expected to occupy the Philadelphia courts all summer and perhaps longer, depending on how many of the killer band police are able to round up. One court already has been set aside to handle syndicate cases and others are to be pressed into service if demand warrants.

One trial was held weeks ago, before the extent of the ring's operations was realized, and Herman Petrillo was convicted of murder. The second trail was broken up when Mrs. Carina Favato pleaded guilty, giving police the clews that have resulted in almost daily arrests.

Since then, investigators have been showered with statements by suspects seeking to escape the electric chair.

The western Pennsylvania branch of the syndicate was opened at least eight years ago and was uncovered through comparison of poisons used by the killers, it was understood. Whereas arsenic was the popular lethal dose of the Philadelphia unit, chemists found that soluble salts of tin was used in 1932 to murder three persons now believed to have been victims of the Pittsburgh branch.

3 Dead, 4 Crosses Bought

This became significant when chemists reported that a similar poison, not easily detected, was found in the body of Pietro Stea, Philadelphia grocer who died several years ago. Stea had once lived with Rose Carina, now sought at the syndicate's "kiss of death woman" who married five men, of whom three died mysteriously. The other two refused to take out insurance.

Philadelphia authorities said two members of the Pittsburgh office, later convicted, once bought four wooden crosses to be used as grave markers, though there were but three victims at the time.

The words of a State Supreme Court Justice, John W. Kephart, had authorities caugnt their significance, might four ayers ago have led to disclosure of the syndicate's extent, it was disclosed today.

Policies Pyramided

Regarding the murder of Steve Allas, Justice Kephart wrote:

"This was part of a plot to murder for insurance, in the partial fulfillment of which six other members of the defendants' families had been insured for large sums. Three of these were murdered by poisoning and the insurance money collected.

"There was a scheme to insure and murder by the wholesale. These people were pyramiding insurance policies, using the payments to carry large policies on their next victims."

First of the three victims was Steve Allas, who died December 2, 1931. His stepmother was beneficiary of three policies totaling $3,088. Next year his brother Andrew died two months after two policies totaling $13,000 had been taken out on him. Another $8,000 policy had been applied for but not granted in time. The stepmother, Mrs. Anna Allas, was beneficiary. A year later Richard Chalfa died.

By that time insurance companies were pressing for exhumation. Soluble salts of tin was found in the bodies. It was revealed that Mrs. Chalfa had tried unsuccessfully to obtain poison from a doctor. During the investigation she was in a hospital and sent her small daughter home to destroy a bottle of white powder which was disclosed to have been used in Steve Allas' food. Both women were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Vincent P. McDevitt, assistant district attorney, announced today that Mrs. Millie Giacobbe, wife of a victim, had accused Paul Petrillo, South Philadelphia "witch doctor," in the slaying of her husband.

She said that Paul, cousin of Herman Petrillo, had cast an "evil" spell" over her and been intimate with her. They decided, according to her statement, to kill Giacobbe and Mrs. Petrillo.

McDevitt said two insurance policies had been taken out on Giacobbe, in one of which Petrillo was beneficiary.

Senate Rejects Cotton Rider

charged Smith represented the cotton proprietor class, while he was speaking for the farmers and cotton pickers.

Smith accused Connally of "putting on a vaudeville performance." He charged the Administration's export subsidy program proposed to "undersell the world" at less than cost of production and would lead to foreign trade wars and retaliation.

Meanwhile, a new question mark was injected into the farm program tangle, when Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, offered a cost of production plan for wheat farmers, and served notice he will "press for immediate consideration."

Wheeler argued the plan, involving sale of "wheat income certificates" to millers and wheat processors, would be "self-financing" and at the same time assure wheat farmers of "cost of production or parity prices, whichever is higher."

The Montanan offered his plan as the Agriculture Department indicated a total 1939 wheat yield of 1,018,920,000 bushels, compared with 930,901,000 bushels last year, with this year's winter wheat crop forecast at 543,928,000 bushels.

Wheeler said his plan had the backing of the National Farmers Union, National Federation of Grain Co-operatives, Northwest Farmers Union legislative committee and the Wheat Conservation Conference.

As Majority Leader Barkley pressed for Senate passage of the huge farm appropriation bill today, Representative Woodrum, House economy bloc leader, said that with Administration "help," the $372,000,000 "above budget" increases by the Senate can be defeated in the House.

The Virginia Democrat said he will move to block sending the farm bill to conference until separate House voter on the $225,000,000 parity price increase and the $113,000,000 surplus removal raise, are assured. He predicted both increases would be rejected if the President supports him.

Disturbed by the latest extra-budgetary increases, Treasury officials said they would carry the public debt so close to the $45,000,000,000 legal limit, that any further increases would make necessary lifting of the legal ceiling early next session.

If it should be necessary, for example, to ask large deficiency appropriations for relief or other purpose at the start of next session, a raise in the debt limit might be required at the same time.

Should the Senate increases be finally approved, the debt at the close of the next fiscal year would be raised to at least $44,622,000,000, leaving a "margin" of only $378,000,000 between the actual debt and the legal ceiling.

P.U.C. Removes Membership Limit On Cab Combines

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday removed all barriers to the number of members a taxicab association may enroll.

Until yesterday an association had to have at least 100 members and no more than 1,000 to receive commission authorization. No explanation offered by the commission for this change.

At the same time the commission rescinded another order which will permit the Town Cab Association to continue operation. The commission previously had attempted to withdraw authorization from the company because it believed the company had not the required minimum of members. A public hearing was held on this question.

N. Y. Engineer, Pitcher Tell of Hotel Battle

Who Was Shoved From Whose Phone? Issue in $25,000 Suit

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Paul Derringer, husky pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds, and a New York industrial engineer agreed today that there was a fracas—at catchweights—in a Philadelphia hotel room three years ago, but from there on their stories were at wide variance.

The disputed versions were heard at the trial of a $25,000 suit brought in State Supreme Court by Robert E. Condon against Derringer.

The engineer alleged he was attacked by the big right-hander while entertaining Harry Woodring, Secretary of War, and others at the 1936 Democratic National Convention in his successful effort to bring the 1937 American Legion convention to New York.

Testifying before Supreme Court Justice Felix A. Benvenga, Derringer said that in order to make a long-distance call from his room in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, it was necessary to shove Condon "as hard as I could."

Condon testified it was his room, not Derringer's, and that he was beaten so severely that he has permanent injuries and no longer can enjoy sports. He said he was laid up eight weeks and lost $10,000 income thereby.

Two witnesses for Condon testified Condon was kicked in the stomach, jumped upon, punched, knocked down and virtually denuded when Derringer was refused admittance to the Condon suite.

Condon's witnesses said they saw bucketed champagne bottles in Derringer's room, but Derringer denied he had been drinking.

Derringer said he was interrupted while making a telephone call, by persistent knocks on the door, which he answered. The "pushing" 'ensued and the fight was broken up by Condon's friends, who had come into his room, Derringer said.

Poles Pledged Russian Aid, French Report

Potemkin and Beck Talk Hour and Half Improve Relations

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 10.—A conference of Polish and Soviet Russian leaders in Warsaw today was authoritatively described as a distinct contribution to improved Polish-Russian relations.

Vladimir P. Potemkin, Soviet Russia's first assistant foreign commissar, and For'gn Minister Beck conversed for an hour and a half.

Informed Polish observers said their talk had improved prospects of the British-French security alliance which already includes Poland. The adherence of Russia is under negotiation in London and Moscow. Whether Soviet aid to Poland was discussed here today was not disclosed.

[French quarters in Warsaw said Potemkin assured Beck of Russia's unconditional moral and material aid in event of any German aggression, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

Some sources regarded it likely that Potemkin had assured Beck there was no possibility of German-Russian reconciliation under existing circumstances. Potemkin arrived here yesterday on his way home from Turkey, Bulgaria and Rumania, and continued his trip to Moscow this afternoon.

A brief communique after the conference described Potemkin's visit as "unofficial."

Foreign circles viewed the conference as a diplomatic gain for Poland. Poland, it was said, no longer was in the position of feeling that she was being asked to turn to Russia for help, since the initiative had come from Russia.

The traditional Polish practice of independent action and direct bilateral understanding was said to have been upheld.

When the Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark sailed for home today with her husband, Crown Prince Frederik on the liner Queen Mary, her luggage included dozens of gifts—compacts, scarfs and handkerchiefs—imprinted with the maps of the United States and the Nation's largest city.

"I've had such a happy time in this wonderful country," she said just a few moments before the liner sailed. "I do hope I can come again, and very soon, too!"

Yugoslav Regent Visits Italy; Plans Talks With Ciano

Rome, May 10 (AP).—The visit of Yugoslavia's recent Prince Paul was hailed by Fascists today as evidence of his country's increasingly close ties to Italy and the Rome-Berlin axis.

Prince Paul's visit offered occasion for new talks between his foreign minister, Alexander Cincar-Markovich, who accompanied him, and Italy's foreign minister, Count Ciano.

As a result of recent conferences between the two ministers at Venice, Yugoslavia is expected shortly to sign a treaty of friendship with Hungary, closely linked with the axis. During the present visit, Italy may try to bring Yugoslavia into the anticomintern pact.

Nazis Boring In, Mexican Charges

Mexico City, May 10 (INS).—Nazi agents are financing subversive activities in Mexico, Vicente Toledano, Mexican labor chieftain, charged today in a report to President Cardenas.

Toledano said he based his charges on reports from labor organizations in the states of Tamaulipas, Coahuila and Sonora. He declared: "These reports state that a considerable quantity of arms and ammunition has been smuggled into the country."

Hull and Somoza Praise Unity Of Americas at Session Here

Gen. Anastasio Somoza (left), President of Nicaragua, clasps the hand of Marine Gunner William A. "Bill" Lee, holder of three honor crosses, two of them won in campaigns in Nicaragua. President Somoza reviewed Marines at Quantico, Va., yesterday

By the Associated Press.

President Somoza of Nicaragua and Secretary Hull lauded inter-American solidarity yesterday at a luncheon given in the Central American executive's honor by the governing board of the Pan American Union.

Hull, chairman of the board which includes the ranking envoys of the 20 Latin-American republics, expressed confidence that under Gen. Somoza's "wise guidance," Nicaragua was destined to play an increasingly important role in the future development of closer and more friendly relations between the American nations.

"It is entirely fitting," he said, "that we should gather here to do honor to the chief of state of a country which at all times has collaborated loyally and wholeheartedly in the work of the Pan American Union and always has stood ready to do its full part as a member of the American family of nations."

Somoza's Reply

President Somoza, replying, described the Pan American Union as the most important organization of its kind in the world.

"There is no better opportunity than the present," he said, "to express the satisfaction and pride with which we should contemplate the progress realized in the relations between our peoples and governments. We can well say, without fear of exaggeration, that we on this continent have succeeded in laying the foundations for an association of nations, organized on the basis of liberty, solidarity and cooperation; history, even in its most successful periods, never has recorded a like organization of similar importance.

"Indeed, the supreme value of the Pan American Union lies in the humane enthusiasm that has ever inspired it. Institutions created to serve and aid free men, under the rule of justice, and international action founded on respect for sovereignty and practical co-operation, are distinctive characteristics that, I am glad to say, are increasingly evident in the life of the nations of this hemisphere."

He Visits Quantico

President Somoza visited the Marine barracks at Quantico, Va., where a review was held in his honor.

During the Marines' occupation of his Central American country, Gen. Somaza was an officer in the national constabulary which they organized. Upon their withdrawal in 1932, he became chief of Nicaragua's armed forces.

Bow but Don't Kiss Queen's Hand, Warns State Department

From two directions yesterday instructions in solemn ritual poured in on the Capital.

How to greet a King and Queen of Great Britain was the burden of a memorandum to the public from the State Department. How to salute the flag, how to place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and when to wear gloves while saluting were outlined by the American War Mothers in preparation for the Mothers' Day program at the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater.

To greet their Majesties correctly, there should be considerable bending and bowing on the part of both men and women, the State Department warned. Upon introduction to the King and Queen one should:

Bow first when 6 feet away—not an ordinary bow, but low and from the hips, arms at sides, heels together and neck stiff. Then the person being received should walk forward 3 feet, watching the King closely. If His Majesty extends his hand, there must be another bow—not quite so deep. It is up to the King to speak first.

You must bow all over again when presented to the Queen, but don't above all things, kiss her hand. The same routine applies to women, but they may, if they desire, curtsy instead of bowing. And remember, curtsy with the left foot behind the right.

When you leave their Majesties, you must bow again and when you reach the door, still another bow. It will be a good idea to see that no chairs are behind you when you leave because all exits must be made backing away from their Majesties and the State Department wouldn't like it if you tripped over a chair or table.

These rules will apply to about 5,000 Americans, who, it is estimated, will meet the King and Queen.

Mrs. Irving Fairweather, national president of the American War Mothers, looking to the Sunday program, has ruled: Civilian representatives of men's patriotic groups should descend the steps to the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, carrying the wreath over the left arm. They should come to a full halt 20 paces from the Tomb, hold the wreath with left arm and hand, place the ungloved right hand (holding or not holding hat) over the heart.

"After a few seconds (though this is discretionary), the wreath may be grasped in both hands and held toward the Tomb in a gesture of donation." Then the wreath is placed. Moving backward a few steps, the representative again salutes by placing the ungloved right hand (or hat in hand) upon the heart.

Oumansky Made Soviet Ambassador

and other centers. In 1936 he was appointed counselor here.

At 37, he is the youngest Ambassador representing a major power in the Washington diplomatic circle. He was born on May 14, 1902, in Nikolaev, the Ukraine, attended high school and university in Moscow and found his studies temporarily interrupted by the 1917 revolution. In 1918, while continuing his studies, he was employed on Moscow newspapers; in 1922, became associated with the Russian Telegraph Agency, subsequently known as Tass, and in 1925 was chief of the foreign department of Tass.

Traveled Widely

For a year, 1926-27, he was chief of the Tass Paris Bureau and traveled extensively throughout Europe and the Near East, interviewing political leaders. From 1930 to the year he was appointed counselor at the embassy here, Oumansky served as chief of the press division of the commissariat of foreign affairs in Moscow. In this capacity, he frequently was a member of Soviet delegations at international conferences in Geneva and elsewhere.

Oumansky has educated himself in the ways of the United States, speaking English as he went along with a fluency seldom found in a foreigner. He picked up the American idiom. With this command of the language, he has spoken at public forums and in American universities.

He is a linguist beyond his grasp of English and his native Russian. He speaks French, German and Italian. Visitors to his busy department in the commissariat of foreign affairs in Moscow can remember his ability to turn rapidly from one telephone to another, speaking three or four languages in quick succession.

Second Soviet Ambassador

One of the first persons to congratulate him, it was stated yesterday, was Troyanovsky, who is said to have been assigned to the writing of an official history of the Soviet regime and who, at present, is attached to the Moscow foreign office. Oumansky becomes the second Ambassador to represent the Soviet regime in Washington since the downfall of the czar.

The new Ambassador is of medium height and his hair is raven black. His voice is brisk and crackling, but pleasant. He speaks in quick syllables, and his movements are alert.

He got a "bad press" when he arrived here in 1936 because American correspondents in Russia had complained of his treatment of news as chief censor. But, it was commented yesterday, his genial manner as the presiding official in the great gray embassy on Sixteenth street soon won him wide popularity.

He was married in 1922, and he and Mme. Oumansky have one child, 10-year-old Nina Oumansky, who has attended school in Washington.

The appointment of Oumansky by the Soviet government followed President Roosevelt's recent designation of Laurence A. Steinhardt, former Ambassador to Peru, as American envoy to Moscow. Steinhardt is expected to assume his new post shortly.

3,000 Women Howl Down Lady Nancy Astor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, May 10.—Virginia-born Viscountess Astor was howled down by 3,000 women members of her own Conservative Party today when she attempted to speak in support of the government's proposal to abolish flogging for criminals.

Catcalls and jeers such as Lady Astor never has heard in the House of Commons resounded for ten minutes through Queen's Hall, London, where she faced a conference of women delegates to the National Union of Conservative and Unionist Associations, among them Mrs. Neville Chamberlain, wife of the prime minister.

Amid feminine shrieks of "Shame!" Lady Astor kept on shouting inaudibly into a microphone. Finally, the chairwoman's bell tinkled. Lady Astor's time was up and she sat down, discomfited, whereupon the conference, with only two dissenting votes, approved a motion deploring a bill to do away with flogging.

A chorus of "No," greeted Lady Astor's opening remark that Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare, who promoted the penal reform bill last year, had won the support of every social worker.

Annoyed, Lady Astor gripped the platform railing and shouted into the microphone: "I am not in the least afraid of your howls."

The chairwoman lamely pounded her bell for order, and shouted: "Ladies, I do appeal to you to give Lady Astor a fair hearing."

Half the audience began to clap and stamp in unison.

"I beg you to hear me," pleaded Lady Astor. The clapping increased. The bell cut her off with a final tinkle that unleashed a burst of applause lasting a minute.

Mexican Union Puts Boycott on U. S. Films

Mexico City, May 10 (INS).—The Confederation of Mexican Workers, most powerful labor union in the country, today announced a boycott on all motion pictures made in the United States. Nazi propaganda films also were excluded.

Reputed Nazi Plot Is Thwarted

Swakopmund, Southwest Africa, May 10 (AP).—The assertion that prompt action by the Union of South Africa had thwarted "a plot to seize key positions" in this former German colony was made today by Lardner Burke, member of the Southwest Africa legislature.

He said police sent here by the Union of South Africa had arrived "in the nick of time" to prevent "fighting and bloodshed."

(On April 17 the Union dispatched 300 of its police under sealed orders to Southwest Africa. There have been reports of Nazi activity there.)

Burke said the plot was unearthed by the British intelligence service in Europe.

Navy to Move Five Cruisers To the Pacific

Reorganization Fills Skeletonized Units To Wartime Strength

Under a reorganization of the fleet's cruiser divisions announced yesterday, filling out skeletonized units to full war strength, officers forecast a still further weakening of Atlantic naval forces to build up the main Pacific Fleet.

Five cruisers now a part of Atlantic forces were given berths in the Battle Force, effective July 1, and officials said they probably would return to the Pacific sometime this summer. This will leave but three cruisers, now on a good-will cruise to South America, on the Eastern seaboard, together with three old battleships and some destroyers, submarines and miscellaneous vessels.

The reorganization order abolishes one cruiser division, the second, and fills out other divisions of the battle force to full strength. Instead of a skeletonized set-up of four divisions of varying strength, the force will have three units of four cruisers each, an important move for battle efficiency.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill increased funds for strengthening the Panama Canal were voted and attention was turned to improving warship repair facilities.

The House Appropriations Committee reported the War Department civil functions supply bill at noon and by nightfall had approved all items subject to a final vote on Monday. Included in the measure was an allotment of $25,274,924 for the Canal, compared to current appropriations of $10,250,125. The bulk of the increase, which, with contract authorizations, totals $17,000,000, is for highly secret "protective installations."

Chairman Snyder of the sub-committee in charge of the bill, said that funds were part of a secret $29,000,000 program for making the Canal invulnerable. The work will be rushed, it was said, to permit the project to be completed by June 30, 1941.

The House Naval Affairs Committee approved legislation to permit the purchase of privately owned drydocks at Hunters Point, in San Francisco Bay, and prepared today to take up a bill for a large drydock in New York.

The Navy reorganization order places the Concord, Cincinnati, Milwaukee and Trenton in cruiser division 3, with the latter to relieve the Omaha as flagship of the temporary European squadron in June. The Omaha will join division 3 in the fall. The Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Savannah, now at New York, and the Nashville, which left there Tuesday for a trip to Brazil, make up division 8, while the Honolulu, Phoenix, Boise and St. Louis will make up division 9.

The Honolulu will become flagship of the battle force cruisers and with the other cruisers which have been at New York is expected to transit the Panama Canal for California ports sometime this summer. All of the other ships except the Omaha and the St. Louis, which is not yet completed, are now in the Pacific.

British Guiana Picked as Trial Refugee Haven

London, May 10 (AP).—The International Commission on British Guiana reported today the territory available for settlement in that country was "not an ideal place for refugees from middle European countries," but possessed possibilities.

Sent on a survey by President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees in co-operation with London Intergovernmental Refugee Committee, the commission recommended establishment of a "number of receiving camps and trial settlements" at the "earliest possible date."

The settlements would include between 3,000 and 5,000 "carefully selected young men and women" and each group would "contain a number of people with specialized training . . . in order to make the settlements self-contained."

The cost of the settlements for two years was estimated at approximately $3,000,000.

Next War Will Spare Noncombatants, German Tells Military Medical Conferees

Post Staff Photos.

Scenic sessions of the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy were held yesterday at the Army Medical Center. Top—Frau Waldman, wife of Gen. A. Waldman, chief of the German delegation; Mrs. Wallace DeWitt, Brig. Gen. Wallace DeWitt, commandant of Walter Reed; Gen. A. Savornin, of the French delegation, and Gen. A. Waldman. Lower—Maj. Victor G. J. Bansteenberghs, French delegate, talks with Helen Saulsbury and Josephine Askens, both of the Army Nurses Corps

Gen. Castellani, though these diseases were common among the natives.

According to the man who had charge of Italian medical services in Ethiopia during the seven-month war in 1935-36, crocodiles were a greater menace to life than disease.

The Crocodile Menace

Many soldiers fell out of boats ferrying them across rivers and immediately were devoured by crocodiles, said Gen. Castellani. On the other hand, malaria caused only 23 deaths during the campaign and there was no fatality from dysentery, typhus, relapsing fever or smallpox.

A medical personnel of 2,590 officers, 188 pharmacists, 584 nurses and 16,000 male nurses and sanitary troops looked after the 500,000 troops sent to Ethiopia. A great part of the time the doctors and nurses fretted because they had nothing to do, Gen. Castellani asserted.

Credit for the low disease mortality—599 deaths, compared with 1,099 deaths from war wounds—is due to "the head of the government," who ordered that shipment of medical supplies be given precedence over the embarkation of troops, the Italian officer asserted.

Mobility to Be Needed

The next major European war will be fast and deadly, Maj. Brandi predicted, and it will present new problems to medical departments.

Heavy casualties may be expected here one day, there the next. Operations will not be confined to a certain general area for long periods and medical services must prepare themselves to be mobile as they never were befor, Maj. Brandi declared.

Col. Love, reviewing American casualties in the World War, reported that 31.49 per cent of the soldiers who required hospital treatment for battle wounds were poison-gas cases, 65.9 per cent were gunshot victims, one-fourth of 1 per cent suffered bayonet wounds and 2.34 per cent were hurt in other ways.

Artillery Wounds to Rise

"It is apparent," he said, "that the increased use and efficiency of the artillery weapon with high angle fire has resulted in a great increase in its relative number of casualties. The modern soldier who is compelled to conceal himself in depressions in the ground escapes many of the flat trajectory missiles from the small arms . . ."

Since there is a constant tendency to increase the proportion of artillery, he continued, "we can assume that even a greater percentage of oattle wounds in the future will be due to such missiles."

Artillery-produced wounds are not only more numerous but more serious than those caused by small arms, the fatality rates bing 9.8 and 4.8 per cent, respectively, Col. Love pointed out.

One of the two women delegates to the congress yesterday described precautions which London took against a surprise attack just before Munich last September.

In an interview, Miss Anna M. O'Meara, chief pharmacist of the Hospital for Women in fashionable Soho, said her institution was a beehive of activity, with bombardment expected at any minute.

Large stocks of morphine, alcohol, ointment for burns, picric acid and dressings were requisitioned and emergency drills staged.

The only other woman member of the congress is also in the British delegation. She is Miss Cecilia K. Lynch, chief pharmacist of the Royal East Sussex Hospital.

Yesterday's scientific sessions were at the Army Medical Center. They were concluded with a reception by the commandant, Brig. Gen. Wallace DeWitt. A horse show was presented for the delegates at Fort Myer last night.

Today the delegates will inspect the Medical Field Service School at Carlisle, Pa., and tour the Gettysburg battlefield.

Hayes Indictment Is Nolle-Prossed

The District Attorney's office yesterday nol-prossed a false pretense indictment against Arthur Hayes, Washington broker with offices in the Colorado Building, on grounds that there was insufficient evidence to take the case into court.

The indictment was returned by the grand jury last fall after Miss Nellie F. Houghton, of Tenth street northwest, told police she had exchanged $10,000 worth of securities and $1,000 in cash for bonds of the Washington Institute Church of Christ, Inc. The bonds proved to be worthless, she said, although she declared she had been assured by the broker she would get 6 per cent interest and $5 on each $100 bond.

The victim, William Leslie Tasker, 47, colored 63 K street northwest, died instantly of a broken neck.

David, Carter, 27, colored, 1021 Second street northeast, the driver was charged at Upper Marlboro with manslaughter and reckless driving.

Goering Visit May Put Spain In Axis Pact

Marshal Arrives In Valencia; Talk With Franco Expected

By the United Press.

Berlin, May 10.—Negotiations designed to bring Spain into the new Italo-German military alliance, which then would cast its shadow on three of France's frontiers, may result from the Spanish visit of Field Marshal Goering, who is to arrive tomorrow in Valencia.

Foreign diplomats believed that onGoering would confer with Gen. Franco on the prospects of Spain's alignment of her large army with the Rome-Berlin axis.

[German embassy sources in Madrid said Goering would spend only a few hours at Valencia and then continue to Hamburg, Germany, the Associated Press reported. The embassy said he would not see Franco.—Editor's Note.]

Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, expert of the German ministry of economics who negotiated Germany's March 23 trade pact with Rumania, also will go to Spain next week to conduct trade negotiations.

Germany expects the deal, like that with Rumania, to culminate in a preferred position for Germany in Spanish markets as well as providing for a large increase in Spanish exports to Germany.

Before going to Spain, Wohlthat will go to London, officially as Germany's delegate to the international whaling conference, but while there he will negotiate on the problem of resettling German Jewish refugees abroad.

Goering, it was said, may remain in Spain for the big nationalist victory parade in Madrid later this month and credence for reports that he might attempt to draw Franco into the military alliance was seen in the fact that Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, also will go to Spain for the victory celebrations.

It was believed that if Spain agreed to join the armed alliance provision would be made in regard to the Tangiers International zone across the Strait of Gibraltar from the Spanish mainland and adjoining French Morocco.

Funk Is in Berne

Berlin, May 10 (AP).—Informed quarters disclosed today that Walther Funk, president of the Reichsbank and minister of economics, is in Berne trying to persuade Switzerland to buy more German goods and to negotiate a new clearing agreement. The current German-Swsis clearing agreement expires June 30.

Nazi Warplane Crashes 100 Miles In France; 2 Die

Besancon, France, May 10 (AP).—A plane described by authorities as a German warplane crashed deep within French territory tonight, almost 100 miles from where the borders of France, Germany and Switzerland meet.

The two occupants were killed, and the machine burned.

Authorities said they found two machine guns in the debris and that papers on the bodies of the two aviators indicated they were Bavarians.

Germans Renew Accusations of Polish Atrocities

Berlin, May 10 (AP).—Published reports of alleged mistreatment of Germans in Poland circulated through Germany tonight as the Nazi propaganda machine renewed attacks against Poland.

Among the reports of Polish anti-German activity was a dispatch by D. N. B., official German News Agency, from Gleiwitz, on the Polish border, saying that refugees were streaming in from Polish Upper Silesia.

Refugees at a Rummelsberg camp were counseled by Storm Troop Chief of Staff Victor Lutze to keep their faith in the Fuehrer. Lutze recalled that he had given similar advice to Austrian refugees who fled to Germany before the union of Austria and Germany.

Pledge Reported Against League Danzig Settlement

Paris, May 10 (AP).—Poland was reported tonight to have won a promise from France and Britain that the League of Nations Council session May 15 would not be used to force a compromise settlement of the Danzig problem.

It was understood Poland raised the question after hearing reports France and Britain were considering Geneva as the logical place for a "painless" change in the Danzig statute.

Community Theaters Open Conclave Today

Confederacy's First Convention at Wardman; Addenda to Afternoon With Touring Stars; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

DESPITE THE FACT that our right arm, Mr. Richard L. Coe, dealt with the matter in comprehensive generalities in a special feature article in last Sunday's issue of The Post, it seems pertinent to call attention again to the fact that the first Congress of the Confederacy of American Community Theaters will convene today at Wardman Park, to continue through Saturday.

BELL

Seventy-five theaters from 35 States will be represented to create this national organization dedicated to the encouragement and development of widespread civic dramatic units in the United States. Community theaters from all parts of the country will be represented. They will come from as far West as the Pacific Coast and as far South as the Gulf. The approximately 1,000 members of the Washington Civic Theater will be hosts to the visitors.

One of the purposes of the organization is the establishment of a clearing-house for the exchange of actors, technicians and original plays. National promotion also is one of the objectives of these non-commercial theaters that are part of America's "ill-housed." Besides the drafting of a constitution and by-laws and the election of national officers, the agenda of the convention will embrace seminars and round-table discussions of play-production problems.

Daily luncheons will constitute an important point of concentration for all those in attendance at this first conclave aimed at a closer coalition among the country's community playhouses. At today's luncheon, at 1 p. m., the speakers will be Lee D. Butler, president of the Washington Civic Theater; Charles Meredith, representing the National Theater Conference; F. Cowles Strickland, director of the Civic Theater, and Paul Turner, representing the American Theater Council. Tomorrow, the speakers will be Garrett Leverton, noted editor and lecturer, and Antoinette Perry, director of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" and many other stage successes. Saturday's speakers are to be announced.

Three theatrical performances will be given during the three-day session of the Confederacy. Tonight, the Washington Civic Theater will present "There's Always Juliet," in the Wardman Park Theater, of course; tomorrow night, "When Ladies Meet," the Rachel Crothers comedy, will be offered as one of the Blue Room productions of the Portland (Oreg.) Civic Theater, and on Saturday night, the local Civic group will present Euripides' "The Trojan Women."

Groups Arrive Early

First of the community theater groups to arrive for pre-convention work were the Richmond Theater Guild, Seattle Repertory Playhouse, Omaha Community Playhouse, Pittsburgh Playhouse, Chicago Municipal Theater, Syracuse Civic University Theater, Civic Little Theater of Allentown, Pa.; Des Moines Community Playhouse, Schenectady Civic Players, Community Players of Houston, Tex.; Vicksburg Little Theater, Old Fort Wayne (Ind.) Players, and the Studio Theater of Buffalo, N. Y.

Eight members of the Portland Civic Theater arrived in town yesterday, having traversed the greatest distance of any group of delegates. They are headed by Miss Mary Morphy, their director, who yesterday afternoon delivered a brief eulogy when she and her players placed a wreath at the tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon.

Great things may come out of this First Congress of the Confederacy. It is instinct with the spirit of preservation of all that is fundamental and best in the American theater. It furnishes concrete evidence that the theater is neither dead nor dying. Furthermore, it gives promise of becoming one of the major bulwarks of the commercial theater as a source of supply of actors, directors, writers and all of the other artisians and craftsmen essential to the progress of the stage.

Since we have gone this far, we might as well go one paragraph farther and say that the local Civic Theater will present George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," as the last play of its third subscription season. It will open at Wardman on Tuesday, May 23, and continue through Saturday, May 27. Director Strickland has assembled one of the civic's best casts of members for this final play of the season, headed by Lansing Hall, as Raina, and Norman Rose, who will be seen in the role of Sergius. So now you know.

Afterthoughts on that hot ride in from Baltimore on the "Union Pacific Special" on Tuesday afternoon:

Anthony Quinn, generally a villain on the screen, but a poet by nature, has aspirations to be a writer. When asked what form of writing, he carved himself rather a large order by replying merely, "Literature."

In the making of "Beau Geste," Brian Donlevy, in a few rapier thrusts, was supposed to be stabbed through the chest by Ray Milland. By one of those freak things that sometimes happen, he was stabbed through the chest so thoroughly that he was confined to the hospital for several days. During that period, the only one who did not drop by to see how he was getting along was Ray Milland.

Despite every expectation to the contrary, Cecil B. De Mille, the daddy of all this "Union Pacific" business, was not aboard the "Special" for the visit to Washington. Mr. De Mille, one was given to understand, had got himself slightly intrigued by the New York World's Fair, or something, and had remained over in the metropolis. It was a disappointment, but, even so, nobody missed him until after the safari was all over!

The Cross Roads Theater, operating in the expanded barn down Bailey's Cross Roads way, in Virginia, will have a downtown ticket office in Washington this year. All seats are to be reserved and will be on sale May 22, at the Earle Florist Shop, 1221 E street. By a slight rearrangement of the interior of the barn loft, where the Cross Roads presents its plays, seating capacity has been increased a considerable number of chairs for this season.

And since this seems to be more or less a community theater and summer playhouse column, you might be interested to know that Monday night, June 12, has been set for the opening of the sixth summer season of the Roadside Theater, out on the Rockville pike, beyond Bethesda. The season will continue for 14 weeks, with each play running a fortnight, as in past seasons. The inaugural attraction will be "The Pioneer's Daughter, or Perils of the Prairie." More fun!

JEAN FORBES-ROBERTSON, the British star, plans to appear in a revival of George Bernard Shaw's play, "St. Joan" . . . She wrote to Shaw to ask his permission . . . "Do it, by all means," he replied, "but better hurry—because I heard they may make a movie out of it. And once Hollywood burns Joan, nobody ever will want to see another burning."

DOUGLAS LEIGH, who originated the animated-cartoon advertisements on Broadway, is adding another feature, which will be exhibited at the World's Fair. Leigh has added a sound track . . . Dinty Moore, the veteran restaurateur, has been saddened by the thought that Father Duffy's statue on Broadway and Forty-seventh isn't illuminated at night. Moore has started a fund to light the statue and has contributed $200 . . . The model who adorned the Herald Tribune's rotogravure section last Sunday is Charlie MacArthur's sister . . . Louis Greenfield, the "mercy slayer" of his son, and Assistant District Attorney George Tilzer, who is prosecuting the case, both are members of the same American Legion Post.

MRS. ROARK BRADFORD, whose husband wrote "Green Pastures" and "John Henry," is in New York now . . . "When will Mr. Bradford come away from New Orleans and work here?" she was asked . . . "He'll come to New York," she replied, "when they bring the Mississippi to the Hudson and put bales of cotton on Manhattan's levees" . . . "But doesn't he find it difficult writing in New Orleans now, with its warm weather?" her questioner continued . . . "Roark," Mrs. Bradford explained, "can't write unless he's sweatin'."

HARRY SCHOENHAUS, who was convicted with Dixie Davis and who received a suspended sentence, hasn't found a job. He has received some money from Davis as part of the advance they got for their magazine articles. Hickman Powell, who writes Dewey's speeches, and author of the new book, "Ninety Times Guilty," is ghost-writing the Davis articles . . . Fred Perry, the tennis star, will return to Hollywood immediately, because he's too ill . . . John Whittaker, the foreign correspondent, has succumbed to the urge. Whittaker, who covered 18 Central and South American countries during the last six months, just finished his book—"Discovering America."

ED WYNN took his son, Keenan, to the World's Fair, and both were part of the famished groups whose appetites succeeded in finishing all the available food supply at the fair grounds . . . After midnight they stopped at a hot dog stand and were asked to wait until a new supply arrived . . . They waited almost a half hour in vain. In the meantime Keenan asked his father, "How many hot dogs do we want—two or four?" . . . "Two," Wynn advised. "Better not spoil your breakfast."

DOROTHY GISH will do a television broadcast . . . Last week's suggestion by the British Foreign Office, that Britain would be willing to offer Germany the same kind of treaty offered to Poland—to come to her aid in case of aggression—originated with Margaret Rawlings, the British screen star, who recently appeared here in "The Flashing Stream." Miss Rawlings cabled the suggestion to the Foreign Office the day before she sailed for home . . . The rumors concerning the imminent surrender of Lepke Buckhouse, the Nation's No. 1 fugitive, were revived at the District Attorney's office yesterday . . . The lack of dressing and bathroom facilities at some of the World's Fair shows will result in charges before Equity.

MAXINE DAVIS of Good Housekeeping magazine visited the San Francisco Valley in California recently to obtain material for a new series of articles . . . She inspected a camp set up by migratory workers and asked many questions . . . "So you're a writer, eh?" the camp's foreman replied. "Well, you're too late. We had a guy named Steinbeck hangin' around here a while back. Then came a tall blond guy named Caldwell—Erskine Caldwell. Also another writin' feller named Konrad Bercovici."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 10.—The Museum of Modern Art in New York which Rockefeller angeled to the tune of $2,000,000 opened today with a fanfare led by President Roosevelt, Walt Disney and many others. They're really doing a great service for Hollywood. They've dramatized the history of the films, gathered together most of the oldies (I believe Doug Fairbanks gave all of his), which films are available for study and used free of charge in over 200 institutions.

HOPPER

But what, may I ask (again sticking my neck out) with exception of Disney and Doug, has Hollywood contributed to this organization? Which is of vital interest to us, because it builds up good will, better understanding and an added interest.

Sometimes I wonder if we know, or care, what's going on in the outside world. When they were planning exhibits in San Francisco I tried to gain the producers' interest in doing a motion picture exhibit, a la Madame Tousseau's Wax Works. The Steuberghs, right here in our own city, have made the finest life-sized faces and figures of every important star. The studios have all those glorious costumes which should be preserved for posterity. Marie Antoinette and Josephine, whose are in the French Museum, never wore finer ones.

Seems such a wicked waste to cut up dresses which cost up to $5,000 apiece, rather than keep them for a permanent display of beauty, achievement and handiwork of our day. Some day it will be done. Will I have to say then it was my idea? God forbid!

We should keep Al Smith right here. After he'd seen "Nazi Spy," he said, "It's about time the picture industry made one like that a year. How about re-doing 'Way Down East,' 'Shore Acres' and 'Blossom Time'? And if you want a real thriller-diller, why not 'Turn to the Right'"? Then he turned to Mrs. Smith and said, "She's New York's number one movie fan. Sure, she gets in on a pass. But she goes to every picture."

Making a quickie costume picture at an independent studio, an actor said, "Send this package off post-haste." "Wait a minute," interrupted the producer. "That's a package. You'll have to send that parcel post-haste."

Patricia Morison took her mother to look at Niagara Falls from the Canadian side, but had a terrific time getting her back into America. Seems mother is a British subject and forgot her passport.

Una Merkel was playing hide-and-seek with 4-year-old Bobs Watson "On Borrowed Time" and hid under the kitchen sink. Got wedged in, laughed so hard, they had to dismantle it to get her out.

Wonder why Ned Griffith ordered 17 rolling pins from the prop department for Madeleine Carroll's use in "Are Husbands Necessary?" Does she have to fight her way to prove that title? And yet they say gentlemen prefer 'em.

Irene Dunne gets her wish. Travis Banton is doing all her clothes for "The Modern Cinderella." Lucky girl!

Found a springy Spring Byington on the new Jones Family set. She's going to play Leo Carrillo's wife in "The Chicken Wagon Family" with a French accent and dark wig. "Well, Hadda, I'm thankful for the wig. You see, I'm working up to that glamour gal you spoke about." Yes, up—but when do you work down?

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 10 (1939).—"Smilin' Through," generally considered to be both Norma Shearer's and Norma Talmadge's best movies, is to be remade as an operetta with Jeanette MacDonald as the star. If you remember the beautiful song "When Two Eyes of Blue—Come Smilin' Through at You"—you're probably thinking it was always a musical—but in the past the lovely melodies of the Jane Cowl-Jane Murfin heart-stirring play, have merely been used as background music.

LOUELLA PARSONS

As long as Mrs. Gene Raymond has to do a picture without Nelson Eddy right away, I can't imagine a happier choice than this, Nelson, you know, is busy on "Balalaika" with Miliza Korjus. Bet you can bet your last rouble that he and Jeanette will be reunited just as soon as possible. Their "Sweethearts" won the Photoplay Magazine gold medal award for the best picture of the year. This, mind you, is not the vote of the critics or the film industry, but of the fans who plank their quarters down at the box-office.

What Sol Lesser will do with "Our Town," now that he has bought it for $75,000, is a question that everyone who saw the play will ask. As you probably know, it was produced on a bare stage with no settings and the last act is laid in a cemetery, showing all the townspeople who had gone on to a better land. Lesser himself realized how difficult it would be to use such a scene in the movies—that's why the deal hung fire for months. Today he and Jed Harris talked with Thornton Wilder, the author, en route to Europe, and a compromise was made on the story treatment. "Our Town" will be made in Technicolor and this marks the first United Artists production in which Lesser and Ernst Lubitsch will be associated.

Dolly Haas, who came straight to Hollywood after her foreign success in "Broken Blossoms" and for two years has never faced a camera in America, is now being tested on the Warner lot. I was so interested, I investigated and discovered that Hal Wallis expects to sign her for "Career Man," in which her accent can be used to good advantage. She'll play Joel McCrea's wife. Nicolai Yoshkin, the unknown actor who created such a stir as Goebbels in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," will be seen as a German espionage agent in this country and I am told, off the record, that Warners are planning to inject heavy dynamite into "Career Man." Not a bad cast, is it, headed by Joel McCrea, Ann Sheridan, Yoshkin and La Haas?

Chatter in Hollywood: Maybe it only happens in Hollywood. I wouldn't know. But certainly all the former husbands and wives gave the folks who ran to the La Conga for the cafe's first birthday celebration an eyeful. Tom Brown and Sally Haines had no more than been seated, than in walked Tom's former bride, Natalie Draper, with Dave Ralston. They had just made themselves comfortable when Bert Wheeler, once married to Sally, was glimpsed dancing with his current flame, Diane Dewey. There weren't, as you might imagine, a lot of reservations. On the contrary, all the marital mixups got together in one big party before the evening was over and had lots of fun.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Carl Lammle, jr., stopped over in Chicago for three days to visit June Travis, whom the gossips say will be his bride ere long; Weldon Heyburn, married first to Greta Nissen and then to a socialite, is admitting to his friends that Virginia Maggert is his heart beat; Norma Shearer's sister, Athol Hawks, jr. (Mrs. Hawks), who looks exactly like her, is Norma's double in the horseback scenes in "The Women"; Reginald Gardiner and Mary Brian may spring a surprise very soon; the Dick Forans expect the stork July 4; Jackie Cooper stepping out at the Tropics with Pat McKennan, a youthful girl friend. How he has grown in the past year!

Bill Gargan and Frank Morgan plane in tomorrow to explain to their brides why they flew to New York without any warning; Andres Leeds, making two pictures at once on the Goldwyn lot, is living in her dressing room at U. A. Studio; Ruth Selwyn planed in from New York this morning; Jack Benny received compliments a-plenty about "Man About Town" when it was sneak previewed at Burlingame; Alice Marble, our local tennis champ, leaves Saturday for the Wimbledon matches.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Tarzan, Jr., Was Incubator Infant

Little Johnny Sheffield was raised from an incubator baby to one of the greatest child athletes of his day to win the role of Tarzan, jr., in the pictures dealing with Edgar Rice Burroughs' Ape Man character.

When he was born in Pasadena Hospital, Johnny weighed four pounds, and was placed in an incubator until he tipped the scales at six. Today, a little more than five years later, he weighs 58½ pounds, is 48½ inches tall and is solid as a rock.

As an explanation of this unusual physical development, his parents say that they merely let Johnny "be himself."

Important New Films Booked For Next Week

"Union Pacific," "Bell," "Baskervilles" Listed; Other New Programs

"THE STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL." The invention of the telephone and the romance of Bell with the lovely Mabel Hubbard, that is imagined to have led the great inventor to his most successful creation, is the story of the film at the Palace Theater. The work had its world premiere here some weeks ago, simultaneously with its opening at the San Francisco World's Fair. Don Ameche plays the central figure, Loretta Young is Mabel Hubbard and Henry Fonda is Tom Watson, Bell's collaborator on the invention. Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Spring Byington, Sally Blane, Polly Ann Young and Georgiana Young have other roles. Opens this morning.

Earle

"UNION PACIFIC." The long-awaited Cecil B. DeMille spectacle of the building of America's first transcontinental railroad arrives with Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea in the stellar roles. With all the care for authentic detail so long associated with the DeMille name, this romance of the early West describes the problems of the young government in keeping order along the right of way. Robert Preston, Lynne Overman and Brian Donlevy have other leading parts in the large company. On the stage, "Revels in Rhythm" presents the Virginians, male sextet; Dick, Don and Dinah, "Serving Smiles;" Carol King, dancer, and the 16 Earle Roxyettes in a new routine, "The Dance of The Cockatoos." Opens tomorrow.

RKO-Keith's

"TH ESTORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE." Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers remain a second week in this film recreation of the past, in which they portray the dancers of two decades ago who packed theaters and ballrooms in much the same fashion these two film celebrities do today. Walter Brennan, Edna May Oliver, Lew Fields and Janet Beecher are in the cast and the music is drawn from the hits of the decade preceding the World War.

Capitol

"THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES." The most famous of all the undying Sherlock Holmes stories by the late A. Conan Doyle, is brought to the screen with Basil Rathbone as the surprising and efficient detective. Nigel Bruce plays Dr. Watson in this devious tale of the unearthly beast that roams the foggy moor, bringing grief to a pair of young lovers. Richard Greene and Wendy Barrie, as the lovers, and Lionel Atwill, John Carradine and Ralph Forbes have other leading roles. Kitty Carlisle stars in the Capitol's stage show. Long familiar to both film and theater goers, Miss Carlisle has appeared most recently on the stage in "White Horse Inn" and "The Three Waltzes." Other acts include Cappy Barra's Harmonical Ensemble, Dr. "Think-a-Drink" Hoffman, Bob Neller and the Three Castles. Opens tomorrow.

Metropolitan

The comic strip figure, in the person of Penny Singleton, continues her adventures through tonight at the Metropolitan, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and Daisy, the dog, complete the household. An as yet unannounced feature will make its appearance on the screen with a supporting bill of short subjects and newsreels, at a date to be announced.

Columbia

"WUTHERING HEIGHTS." Returning to F street after an extended appearance at the Palace, this picturization of the Emily Bronte novel presents Merle Oberon and Laurence Oliver as the volatile Cathie and the brooding Heathcliff. Flora Robson, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Hugh Williams and Miles Mander play the other characters in this adaptation by Ben Hecht nad Charles MacArthur. Opens tomorrow.

Gayety

ZORITA. Following a remarkably successful engagement a few weeks ago at the burlesque house, this unusual entertainer returns for a final appearance, before entering a summer engagement at the New York World's Fair. With the charmer will be Elaine Owens, Jean Carter and Dorothy Darling, display artists, and Herbie Fay, Harry Evanson and Connie Ryan, comedians and vocalists. Opens Sunday afternoon.

'Stage Door' Is Presented At Pierce Hall

Players Enact Famous Kaufman-Ferber Drama With Fine Success

Girls, beautiful and numerous, are the highlights of the Pierce Hall Players' production of "Stage Door," which opened last night at the Players' Auditorium at Fifteenth and Harvard streets for a two-night run.

The play is quite a different piece than the screen play from which the popular Katharine Hepburn-Ginger Rogers vehicle was filmed. As a play, it is a series of sharply pointed vignettes, smartly fashioned, but yet without that cohesion which would have made it a better play.

The large group of 21 girls who inhabit the Footlights Club make a colorful aggregation. The varied characterizations of an ambitious, stage-struck girl; a dreamy, Southern lass, a wise-cracking chorine, a little snip anxious for fortune at any cost, a down-to-her-last-part oldster and a fagged-out boarding-house keeper make for clipped figures and the Pierce Hall performers have a piece of fun doing them.

There is notable work by Jean Darier, as Judy Canfield, whose only competitors, she would have you know, are the elephants. Frances Stuart Dewey plays Terry, quite a different figure than the Katharine Hepburn role, yet vibrant with her interest in the living theater. Rita McGarry is the girl who gives it all up for a home in Wisconsin and Ellen Scholze is the weary pianist, who jingles for the chorines.

One of the best performances of the production is contributed by Mildred Beach, as the unhappy Kaye Hamilton. A sensitive face and gentle playing make her Kaye memorable. Miriam Ottenberg and Elinor Evans have characteristic parts as Big Mary and Mrs. Orcott.

William Draper has one of the most important male roles in this predominantely feminine cast and carries it off smoothly. Edmund J. Evans, as the man from Hollywood, also plays well, and Paul R. Kelbaugh and Sidney Bassler are the be-derbied gents from Wisconsin.

Other members of the large cast include Edith Reynolds, Eleanor Warrenne, Eva Pope, Elizabeth Smallman, Mabel A. Hunt, Louise Shaw, Helen Zott, June McGill, Evelyn Wynn, Nell Childs, Margaret Yoder, Ruth M. Taylor, Georgella Hefty, Julie Gordon, Vincent Hunter, Walter Reser, George F. Hall, Ted C. Gardner, Burke Edwards and Doyle Tripp.

Little

Again the Little Theater has a holdover in "Night Must Fall," which yesterday went into its second week.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is withdrawing this film from the open circulation after the close of its engagement here, although Robert Montgomery has never played so effectively as he does in this role of Danny, the Cockney boy with the psychosis for the perfect crime. His appearance is sloppy and sly, the reverse of his more usual interpretations of suave smart-crackers. Now he is furtive, flattering and puzzling. Dame May Whitty is that counterpart of selfish old women, half hypochondriac, wholly ego-centric, the wealthy old harridan whose money and life Danny is after. Rosalind Russell has the curious role of her niece and companion. Sly Danny both fascinates and repels here; she more than suspects his past and present plans, but her peculiar mental make-up does not allow her to run to friends for help. She, too, hates the ill-tempered dame and is held by some abnormal force to watch what she knows will prove fatal. She recognizes Danny's evil, yet is powerless to even wish to keep him from it.

Strictly an "atmosphere" film, "Night Must Fall" gains its effectiveness from understatement. There are hints of blood, dismembered bodies and sudden death, but none of these horrors actually appears on the screen. A triumph for both Director Richard Thorpe and star Montgomery, this intelligent handling of an engrossing and psychological theme will long remain a screen classic.

Green Denies Compromise On Wagner Act

Lists 6 Amendments Which He Declares Are 'Fundamental'

President William Green declared last night that the American Federation of Labor had given no thought to compromise in its drive to amend the Wagner act, and listed six changes which he considered "fundamental."

He expressed his views at a press conference while two of his associates, General Counsel Joseph A. Padway and John P. Frey, of the metal trades department, were closeted with labor board members in an attempt to reach an agreement of some of the A. F. L. amendments.

The A. F. L. board conference was called, Green said, "to explore the situation to see if an agreement can be reached on certain amendments."

"We have not laid down any stipulations," he said, "on how far we would go in making an agreement.

Five-man Board Sought

Green included among the six changes a proposal to abolish the present three-man board and replace it with a five-man agency.

He conceded that there was little likelihood of the board's agreeing to this.

The other "fundamental" amendments, he said, included restricting board powers to fix the appropriate bargaining unit and invalidate contracts, permitting appeal to the courts in representation cases, fixing the time for complaint hearings, and permitting employers to petition for employe elections.

Earlier in the day, attorneys for the A. F. L. and the board told the Senate Labor Committee their discussions were the result of a "spontaneous suggestion."

Yesterday's negotiations ended without an agreement, but participants indicated some decision might be reached by the end of the week.

C. I. O. Participation Fought

The Senate committee heard brief testimony by Charles Fahy, general counsel of the labor board; Padway and Lee Pressman, counsel for the C. I. O. Then Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, suggested that the negotiations be resumed. He said he thought all persons interested should be invited, but Frey objected to C. I. O. participation, on the ground that it would not be conducive to a "meeting of minds."

Pressman contended in a letter to Thomas that the discussions were "exceedingly unfair to the C. I. O.," asserting that the attempt to compromise was being made before the C. I. O. had opportunity to appear before the committee to oppose the proposed amendments.

Another witness before the committee—William Leiserson, a recent nominee to the labor board—testified that Congress should inquire carefully into attacks on the Wagner act. He said that in both the Wagner act and the railway labor act, Congress set forth the same policy concerning collective bargaining, yet the railway act is generally accepted by employes.

Leiserson's nomination is awaiting Senate approval. At present he is a member of the National Mediation Board.

U. S. Can't Get Out Of Business Yet, Says Jesse Jones

Continued Government intervention in business until "business can do the job itself" was favored by Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, yesterday before the National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association in the Raleigh Hotel.

At the final session of the four-day annual convention, Jones said: "While I am anxious to see the Government get out of business, I do not think the time has yet come."

A broadened public relations program was decided on by the convention.

COCKTAIL PRIMER
Q. Why does a bartender shake cocktails?
A. To chill them—but principally to blend the ingredients.
Q. Are cocktails at their best immediately after this blending?
A. By no means! The world's most popular cocktails—the kind served on all first trains—are blended long before you drink them.
Q. Is this an advantage?
A. Decidedly! Instead of being mixed with a quick shake—ingredients have time to "wed" into smooth, delicious perfection.
Q. How can I get these fine, flavorful cocktails?
A. By asking your dealer today for Heublein's CLUB COCKTAILS . . . ready-mixed in the bottle.

Politics And Milk

In so far as the milk investigation is bringing out pertinent facts it should serve a useful purpose. The public ought to know the extent to which cream and milk are being bootlegged into the District so that the practice may be speedily stopped. There is a real need, too, for re-examination of the District code governing the sale here of dairy products to determine whether or not it is unduly favorable to one group of producers.

It is all too obvious, however, that the House subcommittee conducting the inquiry is not guided by the welfare of Washington's milk consumers or even by the objective of setting up a national standard to which all dairies serving the public would have to conform. Political motives are apparent at almost every point in the questioning of witnesses and the disputes between members of the subcommittee. One faction is fighting to retain for a group of dairies in nearby States the privilege of supplying the Washington market. Another faction is trying to open that market to shipments, particularly of cream, from distant States.

Representative Bolles, of Wisconsin, for example, has introduced a bill that would permit importation into the District of milk or cream certified by any State or county health authorities. Seemingly his interest is in broadening the market for Wisconsin dairies rather than safeguarding health in Washington. On the other hand, those Representatives demanding maintenance of the status quo are probably more interested in the commercial welfare of a few constituents than in working out a constructive solution.

There is, of course, nothing new in this situation. The District has learned again and again that politics in the home States of a few members of Congress are frequently more influential in deciding local issues than the welfare of this community. Congressmen may be properly criticized for taking such a narrow view of the affairs of the Nation's Capital. But it is primarily the system, or lack of system, in governing this voteless District which is at fault. The absence of any real community government in the District forces into the Congressional maelstrom issues that can be properly decided only by local authorities.

In effect, therefore, the milk investigation becomes another strong argument for granting Washington a government of its own. It may be that this involvement of a local problem in regional politics has helped to stimulate the District citizens' associations to renewed activity in behalf of reorganization of the District government. In any event, their action is salutary. The more Congress demonstrates its inability to pass upon District issues on their own merits, the louder will become the clamor for a responsible local government such as the Griffenhagen experts proposed.

A Lad That Is Gone

Back in 1874 the kidnaping of 4-year-old Charley Ross, and his subsequent total disappearance, was a Nation-wide sensation.

For weeks and months the police of many States and even foreign countries were enlisted in the futile search for the boy who had last been seen on the grounds of his home in Germantown, Pa. And from those days down to the present the sad story of Charley Ross has been a tale to tell around the fireside, a mystery which, like "Bleak House," has a beginning but no end.

Now, 65 years later, a Phoenix, Ariz., grand jury has solved the mystery, at least to its own satisfaction. It has decided that Gustav Blair, 69-year-old local carpenter, is the lost Charley Ross.

The Phoenix jury may be right. But does it make much difference now? The law in its majesty can give legitimacy to a claim of identity between a man approaching three-score-and-ten and a lad of 4. But what identity is there, really, or can there be, between the two? For men are no more like the children they were than oak trees resemble acorns. Growth and change are related terms.

Little Charley Ross of 1874 is gone forever, no matter where he is or what his name today. Time does not stand still. The aged Gustav Blair admitted as much when, waiving any claims to property arising out of the court's recognition, he said, "All this is long since barred by time."

Overdue Consolidations

The administrative changes proposed by the President in his Reorganization Plan No. II will accomplish relatively little either in economy or in simplifying our planless tangle of bureaucratic agencies. But, as far as they go, the changes proposed are for the most part clearly in the public interest.

On the consolidation of all the foreign services of the Government under the Secretary of State we commented in these columns yesterday. It is a logical and overdue step, the desirability of which is emphasized by the willingness of the Secretaries of Agriculture and Commerce to transfer functions over which they have heretofore had control.

For different reasons the abolition of the National Bituminous Coal Commission ranks next in order of importance among the changes proposed. The only possible criticism here is that the elimination of this agency has been delayed so long. Ever since the commission's production-control endeavors were checked by court action it has been a completely futile body, racked by internal dissensions and serving no visible purpose except as a haven for job holders. The President speaks mildly when he calls it "an unnecessary commission." It is difficult to think of any of its current activities which could not be handled better by the Bureau of Mines.

Much the same comment can be made regarding the National Emergency Council, which should have been closed down long ago. As a matter of fact, this New Deal agency has several times been abolished by executive order, but heretofore has always been reestablished before the effective date of termination.

It was last revived to give a job to Lowell Mellett, whose appointment as one of the six new White House secretaries seems more probable with abolition of the curious outfit he now heads. The press clipping, publicity and general information services which the council renders can reasonably be carried on by Mr. Mellett, or another, as a White House aid. Indeed, the official propagandist function is more defensible there than in the case of an independent agency.

Transfer of the independent Rural Electrification Administration to the Department of Agriculture seems the more logical in view of the absence of any clearly defined power policy on the part of the New Deal. But this proposal recalls that the Electric Home and Farm Authority, under Reorganization Plan No. I, is to be grouped in the new consolidated Federal Loan Agency. Since the Rural Electrification Administration also has lending functions it is difficult to see why the two similar bodies should be directed to divergent supervisions.

Thoroughly rational, in view of the establishment of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions in the Interior Department, is the merger in it of the War Department's Bureau of Insular Affairs. The development of civil as opposed to military government for our outlying possessions is an obviously desirable trend. This step should further it.

Among the minor changes, proposed in Reorganization Plan No. II, that of the greatest local interest is the abolition of the Board of Trustees of the National Training School for Boys and the transfer of this agency to the Department of Justice. President Hoover also urged elimination of this board of trustees but wanted to see control of the institution itself vested in the Board of Welfare of the District of Columbia.

To merge a primarily local correctional institution in the Department of Justice is a retrograde step from the viewpoint of all who wish to see development of a greater measure of self-government in Washington.

The Government Orders

Commenting upon the refusal of the Maritime Commission to accept demands that sailors on ships under its jurisdiction be supplied by trade-union agencies, the Congress of Industrial Organizations makes an extraordinary observation. It says:

> The attitude of the Commission convinces the maritime unions once again that they are determined to give maritime labor organizations no voice in labor problems of the maritime industry, but we must merely take orders and carry them out, regardless of consequences. This the unions will not do!

It seems to be high time for the C. I. O., and the seamen's unions connected with it, to realize that there is a fundamental difference between the rights of organized labor in private employment and under the Government. In private employment labor has won the right to strike, to picket, to demand closed-shop hiring methods and otherwise to bring pressure compatible with its strength. In public employment none of these tactics are admissible.

To strike against the Government is a revolutionary undertaking. It is an action in no way different from any other attempt to overthrow or coerce legally constituted authority. It is a manifestation of complete lawlessness which no government worthy of the name can for a moment tolerate. In only lesser degree the same applies to other forms of organized pressure tactics directed against the State.

None can reasonably criticize the decision of the Maritime Commission to man Government-operated ships with men recruited through the Government's shipping commissioners, instead of through union hiring halls. The action does not for a moment mean that the seamen's unions will be given "no voice in labor problems of the maritime industry." It simply means that the Government asserts its incontestable right to select as it deems best the crews of Government-operated ships.

To contest this right is almost as unreasonable as would be a demand that the naval personnel be supplied by trade-unions. And to say that the unions will not "merely take orders and carry them out" when Government service is in question is ridiculous. For this is precisely what the unions will do, or else be smashed completely by a Government which is still somewhat stronger and more representative than the C. I. O.

Conscience And Duty

There is much more than sectarian importance in the struggle that took place, at the Methodist uniting conference at Kansas City this week, over the question of whether that church should give its formal backing to the claims of conscientious objectors in wartime. For the issue, decided by the conference in the affirmative, touches the very roots of democracy, not only as a system of government but also as a way of life.

In a democracy the will of the majority is, for purposes of government, the will of all. But that statement, so far as the United States is concerned, requires certain fundamental reservations. The authority wielded by the majority must not be used to crush or destroy minorities. It must not be employed to create a tyranny. Above all it must not be applied in a manner which might infringe on any of those basic individual rights which are embodied in the Constitution.

Obviously, the conscientious objector, standing on the theory that there is a limit to the authority of the State, has strong Constitutional basis for his position. And hitherto those, like members of the Society of Friends, whose religious belief forbids them to take human life under any circumstances, have been excused from military service. But individuals of non-pacifist faith, and of no faith, who nonetheless are conscientious objectors to war, have never readily been accorded the same exemption. It has been held that the proof of settled conviction must be compelling to exempt the citizen from such service as his nation, in extremity, is entitled to demand.

A nation at war may, under the pressure of self-preservation, be forced to employ every force at its command. There is obviously no place in such a time for the malingerer, for the man whose pacifism is simply a cloak for cowardice, for the traitor. But there is, or must be found, a place for those whose refusal to fight arises out of profound religious conviction and who, out of principle, are ready to submit to any penalties and every sacrifice. For them the imperious demands of conscience take precedence over the law laid down by the majority.

This is true because in a free country it is not the State which counts first but the individual, even when the State is acting in the basic interests of the collectivity of individuals. That is the basic fact which sets a democracy apart from the various types of totalitarian systems. And while even democracies tend to become totalitarian in wartime—a case of having to fight fire with fire—there is a limit beyond which a free country cannot resort to compulsion of the individual and still remain free.

That limit cannot easily be set. It will always be difficult to draw the line between genuine conscientious objectors and those whose conversion to this philosophy coincided with the threat of conscription. But the line must be drawn. Even in wartime, the individual must not be wholly sacrificed to the State turned Moloch. And the Methodist conference is serving a wholly patriotic purpose in pointing this out.

The Hairless Age

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

I'd rather have eyes than a nose:
I'd rather have fingers than toes:
And as for my hair, I don't very much care,
But I'll be awfully sad when it goes.

Thus mused Gelett Burgess in the days when The Lark was warbling of purple cows and other notions in the old San Francisco. The lines come back at the prediction of a San Jose State College sage that all men will be bald by the year 6939 or thereabouts. To us the prophecy is as saddening as the thought made Burgess. One by one we shall watch the hairs disappear from our crowns, each with its installment of grief, piling up in the end a huge sorrow. For 5,000 years we shall have to endure it. Can we stand it that long?

That New York barber who won a contest by shaving a man in 18 seconds is so hoarse he won't be able to return to work for a week.

Teacher Differences

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some Washington teachers would be interested to know how you arrived at the conclusions embodied in your editorial of April 30, entitled "Two Teachers' Unions," in which the "Teachers Union of Washington" is praised for having "vigorously fought and successfully defeated internal influences that would have destroyed its usefulness," thus thwarting "Communist effort to bore from within."

The references to the Teachers Union of Washington should have specified that you meant Local No. 8, to avoid confusing it with the four other Washington teacher unions of more recent date. Since your editorial indicates that you have knowledge of only this local, it may be that upon investigation you will find that the other locals are not beset by the communistic nightmares that keep officers of Local 8 in a perpetual state of tremor.

As an indication of how insidious influences have been fought by officers of Local 8 it may be pointed out that after a ballot for officers had been prepared by the authorized nominating committee, other names and offices mysteriously appeared on the ballot just before the elections were held. This and other extraordinary practices, such as asking voters to sign their ballots, are not methods which a democratic majority uses.

Why did the officers of Local 8 consistently oppose and fail to distribute the American Teacher, official organ of the American Federation of Teachers' (an American Federation of Labor Union)? Was it because they felt that only Communists could be interested in such "subversive" literature?

Can it be that they have become so overwrought in the face of the progressivism inherent in democratic processes and democratic principles that they always see it in a red light?

Despite these shortcomings, Local No. 8, of which I am a member, has rendered a valuable service to the teachers in Washington. As you stated, it has obtained higher salaries and tenure. Public school teachers and the community would be benefited by its progress.

A TEACHER.

English In The Carolina Mountains

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article in The Post of May 3, "Mountain Maying," interested me deeply. What the writer told of the Cumberland mountains may also be found in our North Carolina Blue Ridge.

As a native mountaineer, the expressions and customs of our people are a source of history and information. How we have been maligned, misrepresented and vilified! Some writers, after spending a few weeks in our midst, think themselves capable of writing a book about us.

Cloud Cameron's article brought to my mind a number of words and expressions in addition to those mentioned. Just now, when our dogwood is so beautifully white, many of our people speak of it as "bride of the woods," and the lovely asters, so varied and abundant in the fall, they call "farewell summer."

The dainty little ladyslipper is known as "whippoorwill-shoes." Our Blue Ridge folks speak of "fallin' weather," meaning rain. They say "hit's an antic calf," antic meaning playful, and both hit and antic are old English, found in Shakespeare. A person or an animal is frequently called "contrarious." The authority for this is Milton. Piers Plowman speaks of a heap of people, meaning many. Very correctly, I think, mountaineers say "fore-parents," instead of forefathers.

Scores of Shakesperean words are still used—aim for intend, "I aim to go," from Othello; "compulsitory, robustious, from Hamlet, and "mixtry" for mixture is also from Shakespeare.

Gower wrote "A sight of flowers," Spencer uses "mought" for might; Philip Sidney an Lord Bacon say, nestes, postes, beasties, ghostes etc.

"Drug" for dragged "clum" for climbed, "wropt" for wrapped, "fotch" for fetch, are all old English words. "Holp" for help is in the King James version of the Bible. These words are still used in the Blue Ridge.

Our mountain man says "rifle-gun, stairs-steps, rock-clift, church-house, biscuit-bread, ham-meat," and with him chair becomes "cheer," queer is "quare," and care is "keer." Close relatives are spoken of as "nigh kin." They use the Elizabethan words of "scriptur," "nautre," "yander," and instead of a stake he drives a "staub" in the ground. "Peart" is used in the sense of lively, and when they say "He is the illest man in his family," they mean cross or bad-tempered. Old English words are "Fur and furder," for far and farther. "Hit" for it is from the time of Chaucer.

Like Lady Macbeth, mountaineers say "afeard" for afraid. "Yit" takes the place of yet. "Hurtin" is used for pain: "He had a hurtin' in his head." Misery is used in the same way: "She had a misery in her side."

Memorize is often used for remember; "I ain't seen my sister for nigh on to 20 years, I can't hardly memorize her." Name is used for told or spoke, "He never named it to me." I like the word blowth: "The blowth from the appleblossoms," meaning fallen petals.

The language of the Carolina mountains is not a degraded form of English, but a survival of the middle English period. It shows the influence of Shakespeare and Milton and cannot therefore be considered a low form if the literature of a few centuries ago is to be respected.

Restrict Terms?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Irresponsible Spending" in The Post of May 6 notes the vote of the Senate Appropriations Committee to add $381,000,000 to the farm supply bill, on the heels of Senator Harrison's plea for radical retrenchment in Government expenditures, as evidence of the present legislative economy.

It goes to show Congress running true to form on the eve of a big campaign year with renewal of the usual lot of short-term jobs to be wangled out of voters at public expense. What are a submerged Treasury and prospects of bankruptcy as compared with party and individual political interests at such a time?

A radical cure for that brand of waste and corruption would be to restrict Congressmen to one term of respectable length with, if need be, a permanent board of control to keep them in bounds. Now that we have about come to the end of our national resources not in private control and are running Government on IOUs, there should dawn upon us the need for some such change if we are to save such democracy as we have from being sold down the river.

You suggest a doubt of these enormous benefits working to the ultimate advantage of the farmer. There is no doubt whatever that they have worked to the advantage of land speculators largely of the absentee landlord class and hence to the direct disadvantage of the real farmers whether owners or tenants. This effect was pointed out some time ago by a Western farm journal in calling attention to success of the Denmark plan of keeping land prices down by upping taxes on land values to the relief of improvements and other forms of wealth.

WPA Workers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An employment analysis in WPA recently given to the press, in regards duration of time workers on WPA rolls, shows one out of six of the whole number have been engaged in this work only since late 1937

A round average of 12½ months' employment is given for the entire WPA personnel, but New York leads with an average per worker of 20.4 months' employment, while South Carolina and Wyoming show only 9 months, as an average. This means only one or two reasons can be given as to why duration is less in these two States for WPA employment.

It clearly shows by the difference in WPA length of employment that the relief-work crowd have put pressure on WPA for assignments and retention of the jobs in New York, Washington and other cities.

The deserving citizen in need of this employment is still waiting to be assigned to a WPA job.

"Ne Plus Ultra"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Age of Chivalry"—and honesty—seems not to have passed, after all. And if this be news, then I shall welcome the publication of this letter.

On Sunday, May 7, I called for a cab to take me to call on friends. With me were my twin daughters, age 3 months. In the undertaking of getting both babies out of the cab, I left my purse behind.

A half hour later the driver, Mr. Frank Burns, rang the bell and returned the purse. I had not missed it, nor would I have been able to identify either the cab or the driver in an effort to recover the purse.

To the world in general, and taxi-cab drivers in particular, I feel that Mr. Burns should be cited the "ne plus ultra" in his field.

The Post Impressionist

The Back Seat

IT WAS ONE of the newer type streetcars, the swift, smooth-running kind that have a last seat that stretches all the way across the back of the car. The two tiny, bow-legged boys raced for it happily as soon as they got aboard. Behind them, more sedately, swayed a bulging Juno, quite evidently their mother. She wore a kerchief around her head, peasant style, and hugged a book under her arm. The car stopped with a slight lurch and she sat down somewhat abruptly between the two boys.

By this time, though, they were kneeling upon the seat looking out of the window, already engaged in a game all children play on streetcars, I think. Everybody below the age of 6 seems to know the rules intuitively; the more lumbering mind of the adult, bogging down in the legalisms of life, is not so apt to see at once the deep philosophic truth embodied in the postulate upon which it is based.

At any rate the player simply lays claim immediately to any attractive object that comes in range of his roving eye, like a captain of foragers levying upon a conquered countryside, or a feudal baron asserting his seigniorial rights. His opponent, if such he may be called, concedes it to him very handsomely, and only casts about for something equally desirable to commandeer for himself. But to the innocent freebooters and their spiritual confiscation of pie wagon and police car their mother seemed to be paying very little attention. She had opened her book and was reading with every appearance of complete fascination.

Then The Character got on the car. His progress toward the rear was accompanied by a mild flurry of attention that I think he found quite gratifying. And, to tell the truth, in that quiet car full of conventionally dressed people the figure looming in the narrow aisle looked as unreal and almost as large as Leviathan. He was a big, healthy old man with ruddy cheeks and a fringe of white whiskers that gave an undeniable suggestion of Santa Claus—even though a Santa Claus gone fey.

But his costume made one think more of a proletarian Daniel Boone. For it was fashioned entirely of gunny-sacking, cut into a sort of ersatz hunting shirt, belted at the waist and apparently padded. Over his shoulder hung a kind of quiver of the same sleazy material. A huge black bearskin hat supplied the single touch of authenticity in the whole fantastic outfit.

Inevitably he found his way to the last seat and sank down beside the smaller boy, whom he greeted with rather exaggerated bonhomie. The child did not answer at once, but studied the incredible figure with solemn interest, but with no apparent surprise. And when he spoke, his question, and the voice in which it was asked, were entirely matter-of-fact.

"Have you got any jelly beans?" asked the child.

The Character, somewhat nonplused, was forced to admit that he had not. It immediately became clear that the confession had exposed a vital deficiency. In spite of his promising appearance he was, it was plain, a person of no real consequence. And so, without further ado, the two realists turned back to their window, like the King of Spain and the King of Portugal interrupted in the business of dividing up the Indies.

Throughout the whole episode the mother of the children had continued to read. Indeed, except for a single appraising glance at the unique costume, she had not even looked up.

I suspect that the inclination to take a surreptitious interest in the reading matter of one's traveling companions is almost universal. On the whole, I suppose, most streetcar riders do not read at all—or at any rate read only the by-lines to those rich and vivid streetcar murals depicting the health and beauty that comes from the use of certain brands of toothpaste and breakfast foods. These, we are told, the Supreme Court has ruled no one can escape reading. And no doubt the same decision covers streetcar graffiti, although I am afraid, from the fragmentary nature of the inscriptions, that metal seat backs are not the ideal medium for graffiti.

But except for such ineluctable hors d'oeuvres many seem capable of traveling from one end of town to the other without once looking at print. Perhaps, like Dr. Johnson, who thought tooling through the streets in a postchaise second only to tippling as a sensation, they find pleasure enough in mere motion. Certainly most children, like the little colored boys, prefer to watch the world that whizzes past the windows; when one is 4 it is bright with wonders adults have been looking at so long they cannot see. Even for those in high school the printed word seems to have no very great charm.

Nor do the old, as a rule, seem to care much for reading as they travel. It is true that I was once rather startled to see a benevolent-looking grandmother carefully studying a racing form on a bus. And I also remember sitting next to a delightfully unself-conscious old gentleman who read from his book quite audibly, rather, I suppose, as the scholarly St. Ambrose must have done, since his biographer informs us that he was obliged to give up reading in his declining years—because of an affliction of the throat. But most old people sit quietly in a sort of dreamy detachment.

It is those in their prime who do most of the reading aboard street cars and buses. For some reason—probably because they can be handled easily—the daintier sex seems to prefer books, although they also go in for the tidy little pocket-sized magazines now so much in vogue. But the ordinary male of the genus straphanger is able to endure all the discomforts of travel with only his daily paper clutched in his hand.

As the car slid around Washington Circle the reader looked up and hurriedly tugged at the buzzer cord. She gathered up her tots and shooed them down the aisle ahead of her. And as she passed I saw for the first time that it was a dictionary that she held in her hand. DANIEL GALLAGHER.

Fair Enough

THE A. P. REPORTS from Tallahassee that I have been subpenaed by the Florida Legislature to discuss the probability of Al Capone's return to Miami on his release from prison and the activities, meanwhile, of some of his old Chicago and Cicero colleagues in that happy land. This invitation has not been received to date and would be declined, anyway. The first phase of the subject is speculative, and the rest of it can be covered better by examination of Florida politicians, police, editors and race-track operators and racketeers who are on the ground.

For a beginning, the Legislature need not go outside its own membership for witnesses, because Senator Ernest Graham, who is running the customary post-season crime-must-go campaign, charges that many of his fellow members have accepted graft from the horse and gambling promoters either in outright cash bribes or in the form of race-track patronage—which is to say, jobs for themselves, their kin and their constituents. Armed though he is with authority to examine books, records and correspondence, the senator has merely puttered, and the record of his investigation reads like that of a sewing circle.

Books Of Tracks Could Be Examined

FOR ONE REASON, he is a farmer, not a lawyer, and another reason could be the fact—which he admits—that he himself put in for his regular share of the race-track jobs on behalf of his constituents. Last week it hadn't occurred to him to examine the documents and correspondence of the tracks which he suspects of misdoing, and present indications are that this twitch of reform in Florida will be no more important than several others.

In most States a general charge of corruption by one member of the Legislature against others would be a serious matter, but Florida is different. The so-called small counties which run the State regard the Miami pleasure county as a sort of foreign settlement or de luxe slum. They derive big revenues for the mutuel business; and if hoodlums move in, that is a local Miami headache. If it should be shown that backwoods or up-State statesmen chiseled private profit from the sinful pleasures of this alien spot, public opinion would be likely to admire rather than deplore.

Racing Business Heads For Cleanup

THE RACING business, with its gambling ramifications extending out over the country, seems to be heading up to a general delousing. The Department of Justice and the Treasury have taken an interest in the system by which bets are booked in every city and town of any size at all and by which, also, the odds are regulated at the track by the application of money pressure on the mutuel machines.

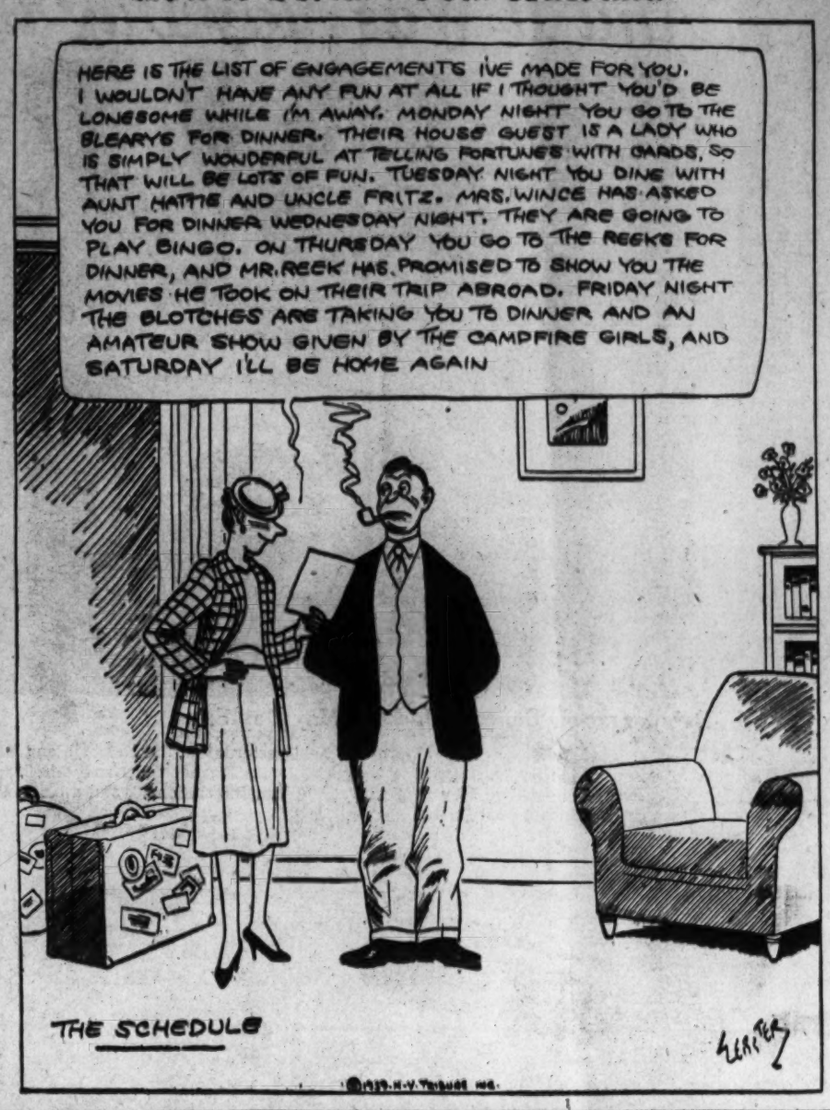

A sucker placing a bet with the sub-agent in the saloon or cigar store in Saugerties finds that part of his own money is dumped into the machines at the track to shorten the profit should he win. In effect, he bets against himself, and the case is further complicated when it develops that wholesale gambler racketeers own stock in race tracks and in this connection exert pressure on the Legislature by lobbying and, so Senator Graham insists, by bribery.

Occupies Status Of Licensed Vice

RACING IS a gambling operation involving about a quarter of a billion dollars a year in the mutuels, aside from the poolrooms and books, and occupied the status of a licensed vice. It enjoys the prestige of some first-class individual reputations, but is naturally full of guile, and the hoodlum racketeer often is described in print as a sportsman by reporters who know better.

In Florida the racing lobby operates as openly as any other lobby in the Legislature, and recently this licensed vice threatened to fold up, thus depriving the State of $2,000,000 a year in taxes if the Legislature had the temerity to tamper with its privileges. From this it will be seen that a racket has grown so big and bold that it now presumes to govern the government of the State.

How to Torture Your Husband

U. S. Need Of Zealots

By Mark Sullivan

Our Tepid Workers

THE MOST PREGNANT thought I have read in many weeks, the most full of meaning for America, if America can be made to understand, is contained in three short sentences by Columnist John T. Flynn. I quote:

"In the world today there is a great competition going on. It is a contest between three economic systems—the Communist the Fascist and the democratic-capitalist systems . . . The victory will go to the system which succeeds within its own borders."

By a system succeeding is meant succeeding in an economic sense. As Mr. Flynn explains, that system will win which brings to its people the highest degree of economic contentment. This test of winning can be expressed briefly and roughly as the largest quantity of employment, the minimum of unemployment.

Whichever of the three systems succeeds in doing this the best and the quickest within its own borders will probably overcome the other systems, will probably dominate the world.

In this competition of economic systems, what do we see today?

In the Communist country, Russia, we see every government official striving desperately to make his country's system succeed. With passionate devotion he strives to make communism work. If he fails in energy or in faith, he is a traitor, and is shot. Men are executed, groups of them, for mere lack of diligence or zeal, which is regarded as sabotage.

Passionate Believers In Germany, Italy

IN THE FASCIST countries—more comprehensively the Nazi-Fascist countries, Germany and Italy—we see the same. Every government official believes passionately in his country's system, drives himself with high dedication to make it work, to make it a success. If he fails in diligence, he is sent to a concentration camp. If his failure goes to the extent of willful sabotage, he would be shot as a traitor.

But turn to the leading democratic-capitalist country. In the United States, what do we see? In the body of our Government officials, those in the level well toward the top, the level from which comes much of the spirit of the whole, what do we find?

We find many, a majority, who believe in our American system, believe in it in a tepid, taken-for-granted way. We find some who believe in our system with emotional fervor, a spirit born of realization that our system is in peril. These strive with real zeal to make our system work. It is these officials who recognize the frictions and obstacles, governmental and otherwise, which tend to make the functioning of our system difficult or impossible. They try earnestly to get these obstacles removed.

Many Half-Hearted Workers In U. S.

WE SEE such men among our Government officials, and we see the larger group of men who, taking the American system for granted, assuming calmly that it will always be, do their work faithfully but calmly.

We see those. But we see something else.

If the whole body of American Government officials, below the highest but above the mass, the level from which initiative is supposed to be supplied and which should give color and spirit to the whole—if that level of Government service were carefully surveyed, we would find many officials who fall into one or another of the following categories:

1. Persons who are Communists or sympathize with Communist philosophy or look with tolerance on Communist activity, some of whom hold important positions in Federal agencies and projects.

2. A class who, sincerely disavowing communism, or even socialism, nevertheless wish to bring about in America something which one of this group describes as "twentieth century collectivism." Any form of collectivism would be, necessarily, such a handicapping of individualism that the latter would die.

3. A class whose attitude toward the American system is one of cynicism, or lackadaisical indifference. With intellectual detachment, they speculate on whether the American system will survive.

Test Of Success Is Economic

THE AGGREGATE of the groups enumerated here, it is tenable to say, prevails in influence, over those who work with affirmative zeal to preserve the American system.

Let the reader ask himself: In a world competition in which the American system is supported by some only half-heartedly and in which the Communist and Nazi-Fascist systems are manned and supported by persons having fanatic zeal—in such a competition, can we have complete confidence that our system will win the competition?

The test of success is economic. Specifically, the test at this moment is whether America gets business recovery. But if America loses the competition, it loses much more than its economic system. We would lose our democratic institutions of Government, with the individual rights and liberties they provide. And we would lose our whole spiritual life. We would lose not merely freedom of religion but religion itself. For if either of the other philosophies dominates the world, it will insist that religion be supplanted by worship of state or of race.

Peace By Conference

By Barnet Nover

The Vatican Offer And The Powers

THE COOLNESS displayed by the powers toward the Vatican's peace move shows how very much changed is the European situation from what it was as recently as last September. Then Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany were not at all averse to holding a conference on the Sudeten problem. But now these same powers and Poland show no enthusiasm for a conference on the Danzig issue.

Theoretically, such a conference would seem to have much to recommend it. By achieving a compromise satisfactory both to Germany and to Poland it might ease a very strained situation and thus possibly prevent war. And if successful in this particular, the conference might be in a position to consider other problems that inhibit the establishment of real peace in Europe.

THE ACTUAL possibilities of such a parley, as seen by Warsaw, London and Paris and even Berlin, are by no means so hopeful.

In the first place, international conferences are rarely successful unless the ground for them has been thoroughly prepared. Indeed, the most successful conferences are, as a rule, those which meet to confirm publicly agreements already reached in private. This is not the situation with respect to the Danzig issue at all.

Some time ago, Chancellor Hitler demanded of Poland that she permit the annexation of the Free City by the Third Reich and that, in addition, she permit the establishment of a German-owned passageway across the Corridor. In return, Poland's commercial interests in Danzig were to be protected, Poland's sovereignty over the Corridor confirmed by the Third Reich and Poland's western frontiers guaranteed against invasion for a period of 25 years.

THIS PROPOSED deal the Warsaw government rejected. Premier Beck made it clear that Poland was willing to modify the status quo in Danzig, but not in a manner that would permit Germany to use the present Free City as a base of military, naval and air operations against the Polish republic. And he rejected out of hand any arrangement that might prevent Poland's unrestricted access to the Baltic.

Actually, as Chancellor Hitler understands full well and Col. Beck understands equally well, the present dispute between Germany and Poland concerns Danzig and the Corridor only incidentally. The real question that is involved is whether Poland is to remain a free nation or to become a vassal state of the Third Reich, whether her foreign policy is to be formulated in Warsaw or in Berlin.

In his Reichstag speech, the Fuehrer let the cat out of the bag when he made it clear that the reason why he renounced the non-aggression pact with Poland was Poland's acceptance of a defensive alliance with Great Britain, an action which any sovereign nation has a right to take.

NOW no sovereign nation that wishes to remain sovereign ever agrees to discuss the question of its independence. It assumes that to be outside the range of any and all negotiations. That is why Poland has been unwilling to accept Hitler's "one and only" offer as a suitable basis of discussion.

On the other hand, no minor modifications in the status of Danzig and no technicial improvements in existing communications across the Corridor, so as to make it simpler and easier for Germans to cross over from West Prussia and East Prussia, could satisfy Hitler. For such concessions would continue to leave Poland independent, and, therefore, capable of living up to its agreement with Great Britain and France in the event of a general war.

Under the circumstances, a conference on Danzig would get nowhere unless Poland were prepared to accept Germany's demands, which she apparently is not, or unless Germany were prepared to negotiate on the basis of the Polish offer, which Hitler has so far refused to do.

THUS for the reason alone that the basis of a satisfactory compromise does not exist, a conference on Danzig is meeting with little approval either in Warsaw or Berlin. And in Great Britain and France the memory of the last great parley now arouses such bitterness that neither government dares to leave itself open to the charge of conniving even indirectly and from the very best of motives in another Munich.

But there is, at the moment, an important additional reason why London and Paris are not overenthusiastic regarding the suggestion of Pope Pius for a five-power parley on Danzig though they recognize the noble and statesmanlike motivation of the Vatican's intervention.

The democratic powers have not yet managed to find a satisfactory bridge between themselves and Russia, though they are eager to find one. At Munich they left Russia out in the cold. They cannot afford to do it again. For the non-aggression bloc they are seeking to build would be lacking an indispensable member if Russia retreated into isolation.

INDEED, of the five powers invited by the Vatican to consider a conference on Danzig, only one, Italy, does not appear to be cool to it.

Probably Mussolini would not be averse to the holding of such a parley. He has just agreed to the creation of a military alliance with Hitler. But it is doubtful if he is willing to go to war on Germany's side should the Polish issue lead to war. The Italian people certainly are not.

On the other hand, any development which would drive a wedge between London and Paris on the one hand and Moscow on the other would be satisfactory to him. For if such a wedge were driven, the Berlin-Rome axis could move more freely and might even get around to securing for Mussolini what he is after in the Mediterranean.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Only A Hippodrome Mother"

The flight of time I long ignored—
I said, "Aw, let it fly!"
I kept my figure down aud cut
Ice cream and apple pie.
I got a facial twice a week—
Boy, all the things I'd do!
But now I say away with 'em—
The jig is up, it's true.

Chorus

For I was a Hippodrome girlie.
I swam in that famous old tank;
I played in that wet hurly-burly—
Twice daily down in it I sank!
With spear in my hand I'd go under—
It wasn't bad work and it paid;
But now I'm a Hippodrome mother
With a girl in the Fair Aquacade.

II

I loved that dear old Hippodrome,
I loved it, that's a fact;
I saw a world of glamour in
Our underwater act.
I like to feel it brought prestige
And no small share of fame,
But something's happened now to prove
It isn't quite the same.

Chorus

Oh, I was a Hippodrome diver—
With hundreds of girls twice a day
I'd march with my chin up, so gayly
Down into that tank, cold and gray;
The memory of it was pleasant—
It seemed but a short time ago,
But now, well, there's no use of kidding—
My kid's in that World's fair tank show.

III

I've dieted on lettuce leaves,
And exercised each morn;
The dough I've spent upon my hair
Was, well, not chicken corn;
My age I've tried to keep quite dark;
I've creamed my face, and how!
I felt I still was youthful, but
It's all so different now!

Chorus

Oh, I was with Thomson and Dundy.
And Burnside, the P.A. bon-ton;
I entered the tank at 10:30
And came up at Jack's later on;
I nourished the memory gently,
But now it's no use, I'm afraid,
For I have a grandchild who's getting
A trial in that Fair Aquacade.

IV

It used to stir old New York town,
That tank act at the Hip;
And though we got pneumonia
We gayly made each trip;
A glamour girl I thought I was,
I did my stuff with swank,
But I'm another woman
Since I saw that World's Fair tank.

Chorus

For I was a Hippodrome mermaid,
I fancied that show was a wow,
But somehow I recognize clearly
It wouldn't be very hot now;
For now I'm a Hippodrome mother,
And gone is the spell of the "Drome"—
My daughter now swims in the chorus
That's swimming with Eleanor Holm!

School Heads Ask Budget Cuts Restored

Wants $174,124 Put Back, Asks $22,400 Added for Crippled

School officials yesterday asked the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations to restore $174,124 of school items in the District supply bill.

They proposed that $22,400 be added for the employment of 16 teachers to instruct crippled children. It was estimated that there are between 400 and 500 crippled children of school age in the District.

Chairman Overton asked that a breakdown of the figures be furnished the sub-committee, showing the seriousness and diversity of the maladies.

The sub-committee was asked to restore funds for salaries of 37 colored school teachers and to appropriate money for the employment of 11 additional clerks.

The school officials made reports on the cost of furnishing heat and light for the schools and complained against the reduction made by the House.

Nover Declares War Now Exists, Without Conflict

Barnet Nover, foreign affairs expert of The Washington Post, yesterday addressed students at the Mount Vernon Seminary, contrasting definitions of peace and war.

Peace to most of us, said Nover, means amity among nations; tranquility at home and universal friendship. But to certain statesmen and dictators, the word peace means that friendly relations will be kept only if some country sacrifices something to keep that peace.

"There should be a new definition for the word war also," Nover declared. "We are now in a state of war and it remains only for the guns to go off. Mobilizations and war preparations actually make war without physical conflict."

Pepper and Boland To Address Meeting

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Representative Boland (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, will address the Administrative Council of the National Society for Crippled Children tomorrow at the opening session of a three-day convention at the Hotel Washington.

Other speakers will include Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education; Dr. Robert C. Hood, Federal Children's Bureau, and Dr. W. F. Draper, United States Public Health Service.

14,000 to March In Safety Parade

New U. S. Cruiser Nears Completion

The Navy said yesterday the new cruiser St. Louis, under construction at Newport News, Va., for more than two years, would be delivered May 19.

The $22,000,000 ship will be taken to the Norfolk operating base for completion and fueling before its acceptance trials this summer. The St. Louis' keel was laid December 10, 1936, and the vessel was launched April 15 this year.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Vice Of The Deficits

AFTER WATCHING the way in which the Senate added some 338 millions to the agricultural subsidy, the observer may ask himself where this sort of thing is going to stop, who is going to stop it, and how he is going to stop it. In one day's work, without a roll call, the Senate with the assistance and consent of all the orators who have denounced spending, have denounced deficits, namely, Mr. Taft and Mr. Vandenberg and Mr. Byrd, added another 10 per cent to next year's anticipated deficit.

We learn from press interviews that the Secretary of the Treasury is "greatly distracted," that the President, who thinks that his own deficit is necessary, thinks this somewhat larger deficit somewhat too large. The great rhetorical exponents of economy, retrenchment, the balanced budget, sound finance and the eternal verities all contributed anonymously but effectively toward the result. The great prophets of national bankruptcy, inflation and whatnot who have been filling the country with their forebodings took the view that bankruptcy or no bankruptcy, inflation or no inflation, they had to vote the enlarged subsidy.

Reasons For Lack Of Public Pressure

DISCUSSING this episode, Mr. Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, made the point that "the absence of public pressure for economy derives mainly from the fact that only a small percentage of the people pay direct Federal taxes." This is, of course, true. But what makes public pressure for economy totally ineffective is not only that the existing taxes are for the most part invisible and indirect but that about a third of all the expenditures are not covered by taxes at all. Under these conditions there is no real resistance, no resistance that is not mere rhetoric, to the continuation and expansion of the deficit.

For the politicians in Washington, in both parties and in all factions, and the politicians in the States and in the cities, the farm groups and the urban groups alike, are operating under a system where the deficit seems to hurt nobody. The deficit is met by the easiest kind of borrowing. These deficits do not soak the rich. On the contrary they provide an ever-expanding refuge for the fortunes of the rich. So as things go now, the politicians vote for larger deficits and the deficits are eagerly financed by the people who have money. Everyone deplores it in the abstract, and everyone takes advantage of it in the concrete.

Their Forebodings Not Taken Seriously

UPON THIS SYSTEM the prophets of disaster, men like Mr. Byrd and Mr. Taft and Mr. Vandenberg, are quite unable to make any impression. Not only do they consent to it in cases when it is politically dangerous not to consent but, what is more important, their forebodings are not taken seriously. They are not taken seriously because the predicted disaster is not close enough to seem real. It cannot seem real even to themselves or they would have fought like embattled patriots against the abandonment of the very idea of economy.

The fact of the matter is that the real evil of the system of deficit financing is not that it is about to produce bankruptcy, inflation, and financial collapse. If it were about to produce such a spectacular disaster, the American people would be quite capable of rising up to deal with it. The real evil of the deficit spending is that it is slowly and subtly demoralizing to the whole Nation, to the recipients and to the lenders and to the politicians, that it disintegrates the fundamental civic virtues. And, therefore, if it continues, the financial crisis which will come, not for some years but eventually, will find our political system so demoralized that a normal cure will no longer be possible.

Difficult For Nation To Look Far Ahead

IT IS DIFFICULT for a democracy to look that far ahead and to be resolute and self-sacrificing in order to stop an evil which is so subtle, so postponed, so pleasurably corroding. Yet it is precisely because the financial position is not critical, but is merely degenerating and disintegrating, because there is no emergency but only a gradual destruction of the habits of virtue, that no easy and practical remedy is to be found.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Otherwise Perfect Marriage Is Spoiled by Wife's Unrelieved Longing for Babies; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman getting on in the thirties, married to a man whom I love very dearly. In fact, we are more in love now than ever, which naturally means that he loves me, too. We have been married for 11 happy years. The only thing that mars this happiness is the fact that I happen to be one of those unfortunate women who love children very much and haven't any. I try to console myself with the thought of the happiness we already have, but I find, as the years go on, that the longing for a child is almost unbearable.

I realize this constant longing is making me nervous and irritable. I even find myself saying things that ordinarily I could never say to the man I love. I don't want to hurt him, and yet I find myself doing so. We have talked about it at times, and I have tried to persuade him to consent to adopting a child, but (much as he loves children) he thinks that unless we have one of our own, we should be content with each other and our mutual love. He says he could never undertake the responsibility of a strange child.

I agree with him to a certain extent, but what can I do to overcome this awful longing? Sometimes I suffer more than I can explain. You will no doubt wonder whether we have consulted a doctor. Yes, we have—we have had the best; and the irony of it is that nothing seems to be wrong with either of us. Just another mystery of life! I hope you can suggest some way to ease the pain in my heart.

HEARTBROKEN.

The Constructive Approach

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Either you haven't had the "best" of doctors in consultation on your problem; or those doctors shirked their professional obligation to carry the diagnosis through to ultimate findings; or you and your husband failed to co-operate to the degree necessary for arriving at conclusions upon which prescriptions or alternative recommendations could be based. It is my belief that no first-rate diagnostician or gynecologist would casually dismiss as irremediable a case of this type, so long as honesty compelled him to admit that "nothing seems to be wrong" with either you or your husband.

I can think of more than one specialist in medicine, practicing in Washington, who would not feel that he had adequately discharged his scientific responsibility in a case of this kind—once it had been committed to his care—unless and until he had established, rather definitely, the nature of the factors which deny children to the marriage; had explained these factors to the patient, pronouncing them either potentially remediable or irremediable; and, in the latter event, had suggested (perhaps in answer to questions) certain substitute approaches to maternity or paternity which might be employed as acceptable half-measures of relief.

It seems to me that any humane, informed and conscientious specialist who was confronted by your desperate, balked longing to have children—and who recognized the devastation which that frustration is bound to visit upon your marriage, through undermining its psychic stability—would, as his least contribution to the situation, undertake to deliver your husband fr his blindly prejudiced opposition to the proposition of adopting "a strange child (or children)." He would do so, I think, if he were convinced that this procedure represented the only possible alleviation of your "almost unbearable" childlessness.

While the proposition of "undertaking the responsibility" of rearing "a strange child" as one's own is serious, it is scarcely more serious, when intelligent precautions are taken, than undertaking the nurture and social development of children of one's own begetting. Though the adopted child's actual parents may be unknown to the adopting parents, the latter are entitled to know, should know, and usually do know, enough of the child's hereditary history to be able to say whether he is a suitable candidate for the social environment and opportunities they have to offer him.

Natural parents can only know, in a general way, what mental and social aptitudes to anticipate in their legitimate issue—basing their expectations on what is known, in general, of the recorded or legendary abilities and behavior of their collective ancestors. Painstaking inquiry and research may reveal as much concerning the child who is eligible for adoption. Moreover, the ancestral history and immediate parentage of many such children is an open book; and some indeed, might prove, on inspection, to embrace more social promise than many of those would-be adopting parents who sought to claim them.

I am inclined to believe that your erstwhile efforts to overcome or compensate for your childlessness have not been commensurate with the grief this state has engendered. I think you have been more resigned to heartbreak that you have been committed, whole-heartedly, to the proposition of finding a suitable outlet for your pent-up maternal emotions. My advice to you is this: First, make one more approach, purposeful and exhaustive, via gynecological means, to the possibility of becoming a bonafide mother. Second, if you find that avenue absolutely closed, enlist the gynecologist's aid in persuading your husband to open his mind to the proposition of having children by adoption.

Third, if this, too, fails—accept your situation as Destiny's indicator that you have been elected (as so many childless women before you have been elected) to exercise your tremendous wealth of mother love in the service of all unloved, neglected, rejected children. What could not be one child's, or a few children's, portion, may become a kind of endowment of maternal sympathy, understanding and championship available to all children whose own parents fail them. In other words, "ease the pain (of childlessness) in your heart," by releasing your love for children through social channels—as, for instance, through working with child-care institutions or for better child welfare legislation. In so doing, you will be demonstrating the authenticity of your love for children: while not to do so would be to imply that your emotion or its motive is intensely selfish and of no potential value to any child. Styles for Younger Generation

These little girls demonstrate their preferences in dress and coiffures. The dainty blonde, who clings to her golden curls and dolls, is sure to like the feel of nice lingerie. This youthful fondness for dainty underthings is worth fostering. The slip shown is of fine soft nainsook, edged in imported Val lace absolutely sanforized-shrunk and guaranteed for permanent fit. The little tomboy in braids wears washable guaranteed garments too. Her cotton gabardine overall is copen blue which she wears over a blue and white striped cotton knit basque

Actress Adapts Styles to Height

Hollywood, Calif. — Priscilla Lane becomes champion for every petite lady from here to Paris when she refuses to be bluffed by fashion taboos levelled at girls of slight proportions. She accepts every new style she likes, but carefully adapts it to her own height.

Most little girls run from the contrasting blouse and skirt mode because divided lines make "shorties" shorter. Not Priscilla. She conceives a long-sleeved, high-necked blouse in blue and white striped madras and teams it with a high-waisted blue skirt. Stripes, running vertically, give the bodice a long look. A high waistline adds length to legs.

"Now, it won't take hardly any and—oh, yes, be sure to lie down a half-hour before lunch and a half-hour after, and remember NEVER to hurry . . ."

"Now, it won't take hardly any time just to come to a few committee meetings . . . and, besides, think of the honor . . ."

"Of course, you drive your own car, Miss X?"

"I'd just love for you to come out to dinner tonight . . . and see the garden . . ."

"Why dont' you EVER write?"

"You must meet a lot of interesting men in your office?"

"Now, of course, you've got nobody but yourself to spend your money on."

"Say, what on earth do you do with your evenings anyway?"

"Now, Miss, you can get these four famous magazines with these top-notch fiction writers and this lovely Encyclopedia of Culture for the price of only one subscription. Just think of all the reading matter . . ."

"Yes, but they're all wearing these dressy hats to the office . . ."

"Say, I've got a little friend here I'd like for you to meet. She doesnt' know a soul——"

"But it will only take ten minutes a day . . ."

"My, it must be nice to have your own money and be able to go places and see things and have a good time!"

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE:

"Now, just take this prescription and—oh, yes, be SURE to lie down whenever you feel like it."

"We thought we'd ask you to make the sandwiches—you always have such a marvelous knack at such things."

"What a perfectly DARLING kitchen! If I were you I'd simply live in it."

"I suppose, of course, you play a lot of bridge."

"It must be so much fun to have a lot of kiddies around all the time."

"Well, of course, staying at home this way, you really don't need many clothes."

"Now, please don't go to any trouble. Just treat us like home folks."

"You sheltered women never know what it is to worry about bills . . . and insecurity."

"You always serve such lovely things and entertain so beautifully. I do wish I were domestic."

"I suppose the radio is a lot of company for you during the day?"

"Say, I wish you'd call on a little friend of mine who's just moved here and is terribly lonely."

"If I had as cute a house as this I'd never want to go anywhere."

"Of course, though, with all the modern conveniences, there's really hardly anything left to do around a house."

Reducing Exercises Made Pleasant by Swinging Them

FOR MOST people, "swing" has to do with music and dancing, but if exercises bore you—try swinging them! That's the use to which Amy Ellerman, the noted concert and opera singer, puts the popular syncopated form of activity, and she says it keeps her fit even during the most strenuous concert tours.

According to Miss Ellerman, swing exercises are more beneficial since they induce a natural rhythm of the muscles and an exhilaration of the spirits instead of the boredom of a cut-and-dried routine.

Try This Routine

Stand with the feet about 15 inches apart and drop the arms loosely in front, allowing the trunk to flop forward also, and cross the wrists with a loose-jointed, relaxing motion. Then swing the arms apart, high in the air, and rise on the toes. Relax into the first position and keep it up in one-two rhythm.

The foregoing exercise calls a surprising number of muscle groups into action. You will find that it strengthens the lower abdominal wall, stretches the waist and firms the upper arms. Besides all that, it is an effective circulation jogger.

Stand with feet wide apart, left hand on hip. On the first count, swing the right arm well across the body. On the second count swing it high up to the right and backward; twisting the upper part of the body in the direction of the swing. This exercise makes a pivot of your waist—always a slimming procedure—and strengthens the pectoral muscles. Repeat to the count of one-two for ten times, then change arms.

Removes Fatigue Toxins

Instead of waiting until she is rested to do these exercises, Miss Ellerman likes their stimulus as an antidote to fatigue. If she is feeling fagged out and "jumpy," a swing session leaves her feeling refreshed.

'Up' Hair Styles Are Followed By Children

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

A STROLL through any of Washington's elementary or kindergarten schools will unearth this discovery—that your darling daughter has stolen the baby coiffur right off your own head.

If you still don't realize what little filchers the younger generation is growing up to be, then glance at the comments given here by Helen Zeitler, manager of Washington's newest department store beauty salon.

'Up' Hair for Tots

"Ever since women started upping their hair last year," she said, "there has been a decided variation of former classic hair styles for children. Tots, from the toddler age on up, love to copy their parents' whims. They have taken over 'up hair' as though it were their own heritage. Peer through the bars of any public school yard and you will discover the majority of youngsters weighed down by top knots of curls, bangs and rolls tacked in place with bows or fancy pins, each one aping on a small scale the coiffure her mother wore last fall."

Copycats though they be, Miss Zeitler feels that tots are not as Hollywood-conscious as are their elders, who want to leave the beauty salon looking like Hedy Lamarr—regardless. Only about half the little girls who frequent children's haircutting rooms request "little Shirley curls" or "bangs like Jane Withers." The others prefer to look like Big Sister or the No. 1 beauty of the kindergarten whirl. Miss Zeitler also points out that there will always be little girls of breeding who cling to their pigtails, their little Dutch bangs or their soft long bobs.

Simple Hair Rules

For mothers who care as much about their children's beauty as they do their own, Miss Zeitler has these suggestions:

"Hair should be cut every two weeks for healthy growth and neat appearance.

"Permanent waves are absolutely not harmful for growing children. Any child 4 or 5 on may begin with a good quality wave.

"The same permanent rules for grownups applies to tots; quality should never be sacrificed for price; an oil base and mild solution should always be used; shorter hair takes a permanent better than long hair.

Farth Bacon's Fawn Proves to Be a Goat Sculptress Tells of Working With Quints

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Remember the celebrated tragedy of Murray Hill a few Sundays ago, when shapely blonde Faith Bacon, cultural dancer, tried to take her "fawn" for a walk opposite my house—and Faith wearing a few wisps of chiffon? All in the sweet name of publicity. Well, the topper has been put on that Sabbath display, since I am told that the shivering, scared little beast was not a fawn at all but some species of Mexican goat! Imagine what pictures we'd have had in the papers if that darling little fawn-goat had decided to butt Faith in the—well, had decided to butt Faith? Gosh, what fun we missed!

THE ATLANTIC FLEET has been having a fine time in the Hudson. They threw a big ball at the Astor Hotel the other night for 3,000 of the gobs—the girls being members of local organizations dealt out with a chaperone for each ten. The chaps took it easy, and gobs and gals had a wonderful time at la danse.

Broadway is in a funny state. Business in the theaters has not been good since the fair opened. Lots of hit shows closed for the season—Nazimova only lasted four performances in "The Mother." On the other hand, three big musical shows slightly reduced prices in the hope of luring visitors in to see the pretty girls and the funny men.

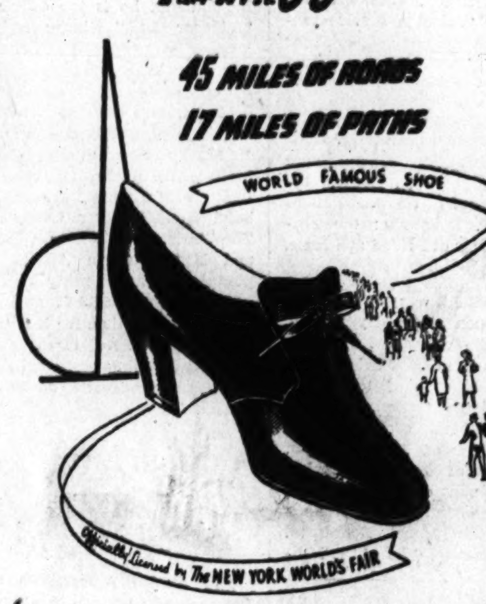

MADAME SUZANNE SILVERCRUYS, the Belgian sculptress, is back in New York after sculping the Dionne Quints, now fat and sassy at 5. She tells me they speak a pigeon-French only understood among themselves, and are busily practicing curtsies for the coming of the King and Queen of England.

I saw Lady Brooke, Ranee of Sarawak, off for England, after a visit with her pretty blonde daughter, Baba, in Hollywood. Seems to me that the girl's wrestling spouse, Bob Gregory, really sold himself to mamma-in-law, for she had nice things to say to him. And she cautioned us again not to call her daughters "princess," a title to which they have no right at all.

Series of Parties Begins For Mlle. Eve Curie

Daughter of Famous Scientists Attends Ceremony at Polish Embassy, Dinner at French

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

CENTERING THE SOCIAL spotlight today is Mlle. Eve Curie, who arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon for a brief visit at the Polish Embassy.

A noted daughter of famous parents (Pierre and Marie Curie), Mlle. Curie had no sooner arrived than she was plunged into a partying round that has been planned for her ever since she came to this country early in March.

Since she is half French and half Polish, her social calendar here is accented with fetes arranged by both the French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, and the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki.

Last evening, she was guest of honor at a dinner at the French Embassy; this evening she will be similarly complimented at the Polish Embassy.

JUSTICE AND MRS. Felix Frankfurter were ranking guests at last night's party. Others there included the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Foster Stearns, the newly appointed United States Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Alexander Weddell.

Also, the Australian Counselor of the British Embassy, Keith Officer; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Miss Harriet Winslow, Henri Bernstein; Jacques Dumaine, Count and Countess Gabriel de Gramont, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet.

THE FIRST EVENT Mlle. Curie attended after arriving was the ceremony yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the Polish Embassy, where Miss Mabel Boardman, Arthur Krock and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson were presented with the decoration of the Order of Polonia Restituta. Citations were given for "valuable service rendered in fostering closer relations between Poland and the United States."

Antoni Roman, Polish minister of industry and commerce, made the presentation. Among those present were Mme. Roman, the Vice Minister of Communications and Mme. Bobowska; the Foreign Minister of Poland and Mme. Zaleska.

THIS FETE was the second Mme. Roman attended yesterday. Earlier, she was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mme. Wankowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy.

Others in the company were Mme. Bobowska, Mme. Zaleska, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; Miss Mabel Boardman, Mme. Chramiec, wife of the Military Attache of the Polish Embassy, and Mme. Gruszka, wife of the Commercial Attache.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Among foreign notables scheduled to come to Washington within the next few weeks will be the Maharajah of Rajpipla, who arrived in New York on Monday to visit the World's Fair . . . One of the first events planned for him was a cocktail party given on Tuesday by Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell and her daughter, Miss Ann Mitchell, in their apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria . . . Both Mrs. Mitchell and her pretty daughter visit here frequently and a number of their Washington friends were in the distinguished company that gathered to meet the Maharajah . . . Incidentally, he is the owner of "Windsor Lad," winner of the English Derby in 1934 . . . His estate near Bombay is reported to be one of the most magnificent in India, and each year he entertains many visitors there . . . He also spends much time in England, where he has an estate on the river Thames, around the bend from Windsor Castle . . . The Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold are planning a garden party for Saturday that I wouldn't miss for anything. The time for it is from 5:30 to 9:30 p. m. Chances are, guests will come early and stay late—as they usually do at the Arnolds.'

Brazilian Envoy Gives Dinner For the Lindsays

The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay were guests of honor at the dinner given last evening by the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins. Others in the company included the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, and Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton.

Still other guests were Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union; Chevalier von Rappard, former Netherlands Minister to the United States; George T. Summerlin; the Counselor of the Netherrlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Hanes, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Duggan and the Second Secretary of the French Embassy, Baron James Baeyens, and Baronne Baeyens.

Also Bocayuve Cunha, Senhora de Cunha and Senhorita Cunha, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Mr. and Mrs. B. Friele, of New York; Miss Marian Trumbull, and, from the Brazilian Embassy staff, the First Secretary and Mme. Mario Guimaraes.

Randall-Young Wedding Held

Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Martha Ruth Young, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Frank Walker Young, and Milton Cross Randall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Randall, of San Antonio, Tex. The Rev. Noble E. Powell officiated, assisted by Dr. A. R. Bird.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white lace and marquisette, floor-length with no train and an extremely full sweeping skirt. Her fingertip tulle veil was held by a cap ornamented with tiny seed pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Annie Claire Randall, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in the Nile green marquisette, her dress fashioned like that of the bride's, and wore a small matching hat with a veil. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

T. J. Lowe, of Washington, was the best man, and the ushers were C. C. Brown, William W. Sterrett, John B. Brown and Robert A. Herring, all of Washington. Immediately following the ceremony there was a small reception at the home of the bride's parents for the members of the immediate families and a few of their intimate friends. The bride's mother was gowned in beige lace with touches of lavendar. A profusion of spring flowers decorated the house.

When the couple left for their honeymoon, a trip South by motor, the bride was wearing a black and white chiffon suit with black patent leather accessories. They will make their home in San Antonio.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Calvin Young of Selma, Ala., and Miss Elisa Cortes, of New York City.

Comdr. Thomas Dinner Host

Although Mr. and Mrs. William La Tour, who were to have been guests of honor, were called away from the city unexpectedly, the dinner planned for them by Mrs. George T. Marye took place as scheduled last evening at the 1925 F Street Club. Mr. La Tour recently presented a monetary gift to Harvard University and the ceremony of acceptance which he is to attend necessitated his leaving early this week.

But the dinner went on anyway with Mrs. Marye's son-in-law, Commander William D. Thomas, acting as host.

Mrs. Marye will leave tomorrow for the West Coast and her home in Burlingame, Calif. She may return to Washington in June with her daughter, Mrs. Thomas, for a brief stay. Mrs. Cloman expects to visit Mrs. Marye in Burlingame this summer.

Guests at Comdr. and Mrs. Coleby's Cocktail Party Drift From House to Enjoy Sunset

THESE ARE garden days in Washington. Even a 2-foot wedge of lawn with one lilac bush and three tulips is considered by hostesses a better setting for cocktail parties, come the spring, than the most enormous and lavishly furnished drawing room.

The guests at Commander and Mrs. Anthony Coleby's cocktail party yesterday afternoon started off sitting like city slickers in comfortable chairs inside, but after half an hour everybody drifted out to the small plot of lawn behind their home on Tracy place, and there they stayed contentedly looking over a brick wall at a perfectly swell sunset. Commander Coleby is naval attache of the British Embassy, and guest of honor at his small and very pleasant party was Mrs. John Lawrence, whose husband is flag lieutenant (British for aide-secretary) to the commander in chief of the Bermuda station of the fleet.

Her husband was here with the flagship York on its visit to Washington about a year ago, and stayed at the British Embassy. Mrs. Lawrence was unable to come at the time, so is making up for it by a visit now. She is at the Mayflower before leaving for New York, whence she will embark for Bermuda.

SEEN AT the Colebys': The hostess, who has true Irish wit, perched on the arm of a chair talking to Benjamin Plunket . . . Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, in a black and yellow polka-dotted print, talking things over with Mrs. Harold Hinton, striking, but too pale after a recent illness, in a soft green wool frock with plaits and short sleeves . . . Marshall Eznicios, who had been riding, joining Mrs. Eznicios, who wore a mulberry colored print with a small black velvet collar.

SHERLOCK DAVIS being more amusing than ever over a champagne cup . . . Nora Magee telling friends that she will leave in June to spend the summer in Canada with her family (she is social secretary to Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister). Miss Irene Boyle, of the British Embassy, who will continue her social secretarial duties at the Embassy when the newly named Ambassador, Lord Lothian, arrives . . . the First Secretary of the Embassy and Mrs. Hoyer Millar and the Naval Attache and Mrs. Curzon-Howe . . . Mrs. Higginson Rogers, in an enormous white hat and a sunburn . . . Mrs. L. M. C. Smith and Mrs. Donald Hiss . . . Anthony de Balasy, of the Hungarian Legation, squiring about the new Attache, M. Alth, who takes the place of "Kepi" Schell. Mrs. Harold Sims comparing notes with Miss Betty Beale . . . and one or two others, most of them lingering on until almost 8 o'clock.

Another garden party scheduled for the near future is that of Mr. and Mrs. Thacher Winslow. They will entertain on Saturday, May 20, in honor of Emlen Davies and her fiance, Robert Grosjean. The party will be held at Ranleigh, the home of Mrs. Winslow's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Leigh, where the Winslows have a cottage . . . And Mrs. Scudder Doeg has cards out for a small dance the following Saturday, May 27, at the 1925 F Street Club.

VIRGINIA COWLES has arrived in New York on the Europa to do a series of articles on the United States for the London Times. Instead of sending an Englishman who would look us over with rather a jaundiced and superior eye, the Times sends Miss Cowles, who is an American and a sister of Mrs. Willard Reed, who lived here with Mrs. Jerauld Wright before both were married. Virginia has been abroad for over two years and has made a name for herself as one of the leading women journalists on the Continent. She, Mrs. Reed, and Fernanda de Mohrenschildt, a granddaughter of former Senator William G. McAdoo, leave shortly to discover America on a tour of the West.

Business Should Aid Masses, O'Mahoney Says

Senator Addresses Washington Branch Of A. A. U. W.; Asserts Corporations Deprive Men of Economic Freedom

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Corporations and not the Government should support the masses, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of the Temporary Committee on Economic Recovery, declared last night in an address before the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women. Economic freedom for the individual cannot be achieved through big Government, for it is then a dictatorial state—it must come through business, he said. Dr. Harry Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, also was on the program.

Speaking on "Righting Our System for Progress," Senator O'Mahoney urged that charters of great corporations should be written so that they could not be perpetuated, instead of leaving regulation to boards and committees.

"The United States was the first Government to protect the individual, but now individuals are too protected to sustain themselves," he said.

Corporations Deprive Men of Freedom

Corporations have made our modern life possible but have deprived men of their individual economic freedom. The original purpose of business was to serve the people but it now has been made an end in itself. Corporations have become so big, they are private governments or economic states, and the world today is a development of many economic states in which the individual has lost his economic freedom.

"Our problem," said Senator O'Mahoney, "is to adjust these corporate enterprises which have once been beneficial so as to make it possible for them to support the people. We cannot permit the country to be divided into peasant and industrial classes. We must make the organizations men have created work to serve the individual citizen."

Mrs. Robert Olesen, president of the branch, opened the meeting which followed a club dinner, and Miss Bertha Nienburg, chairman of the committee on the economic and legal status of women, introduced the speakers.

People Should Support Themselves

Dr. Byrd talked on "Democracy." People should be supported not by the Government, nor by corporations, but by themselves, he said, emphasizing the fact that education was the foundation of all endeavor to correct the situation.

Among the 85 guests who attended the dinner and remained to ask questions and carry on discussions following the talks were C. A. Robinson, general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Leslie Whitten, manager of the Graybar Electric Co., who accompanied Mrs. Whitten, a club officer; Dr. Olesen; Dean Adele Stamp, of the University of Maryland; Mrs. Amy Ransome, who is here from California; Mr. and Mrs. Josha Evans, Miss Gwladys Jones, national executive secretary of the Quota Club; Dr. Phoebe Crittenden, of the staff of George Washington University Hospital; Mrs. John Donaldson; Dr. Mary Mayer and Mrs. Horace Torbert.

Writers Honor Polish Editor

Although family life is the first concern of Polish women, they have attained an enviable place for themselves in the professions, Mme. Marie Roman, wife of the Polish minister of industry and commerce told members of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington yesterday afternoon. She spoke at a reception given in her honor at the Raleigh Hotel.

Mme. Roman is editor of Rani-Domu, one of the leading Polish magazines for women. She quoted Bismarck's remark in his memoirs; "I was not afraid of the Polish men, but of the Polish women," and cited their service in various capacities during the World War and their present Association of Housewives, devoted to economic preparation in case of war.

Women in Poland have little time for club activities, she said, because they usually have large families of children which occupy their time for many years. She attributed the steady increase of the Polish population to the fact that it is chiefly an agricultural nation and that large families are more common to rural than to urban areas.

Mme. Wankowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, was present, as was Mme. Stefan Poradzewska, from the Embassy. With Mme. Roman were Mme. Hellene Bobkowska, daughter of the President of Poland and wife of the former secretary of state; Ludwike Ciechanowiecka, a journalist and Xawery Pruszynski.

Women Discuss Foreign Policies

San Francisco, May 11 (AP).—Congressional tinkering with the Nation's foreign policy was condemned yesterday by the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its national council meeting.

The delegates, representing 2,000,000 club members, resolved to combat "any legislation calculated to weaken or destroy" the "administration of foreign policy in the hands of the President," on the grounds that "legislation which seeks to determine diplomatic strategy in advance may prove to be contrary to the common good."

Another resolution enlisted condemnation "of the growth of intolerance, injustice or religious discrimination . . ." and indorsed United States participation in the intergovernmental committee on political refugees.

Increased Federal participation in the support of public education "without Federal control," was approved. A fourth resolution mentioned 40,000,000 rural people without access to public libraries, and indorsed "the principle of Federal aid to promote equalization of library service."

The council also approved the objectives of the national program and urged favorable Congressional consideration "for the expansion of public health and maternal and child health services and hospital and clinic facilities;" medical service for the needy, and "general programs of medical care developed by individual States."

Use Chintz For Color And Cheer

by "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Grandmother might be entranced with the countless materials available today for summer draperies . . . but I somehow feel she would still insist that nothing quite takes the place of chintz . . . especially for period rooms. I think most women would agree that chintz is perfect for the living room . . . yet few women realize that it is equally effective used in the bedroom too. I picture today a charming floral-patterned glazed chintz bedroom group that comes in charming colors. The spread introduces a completely quilted top, with deep ruffled flounce, and costs but 4.98 for a single or double size. Matching pinch-pleated draperies may be had at 2.98 a pair and a gay flounce for your vanity costs the same. Choose from a soft moss-green, rose-dust, gold, Federal blue or ivory background printed in floral striped old fashioned flowers.

Women Charge That Standard Brands Aren't

Monopoly Committee Hears of Efforts to 'Make Ends Meet'

By the United Press.

The National Monopoly committee yesterday temporarily suspended its inquiry into the affairs of multi-billion dollar industries to hear two housewives describe the difficulties of making both ends meet.

Mrs. Alice Belester told the committee that no matter how hard she tried, she was unable to make her 1938 family income of $1,140 cover expenses totaling $1,642. The deficit, she said, was met by borrowing $510.

Mrs. Paul S. Roller, of Berwyn, Md., another representative of consumers' groups, told the committee that consumers cannot even rely on uniform quality of standard brands. She urged standard grading of food and other products.

Sizes Held to Vary

She is chairman of the consumers study group of the College Park (Md.) branch of the American Association of University Women.

She said she had bought canned peaches of the same brand and found them different. She was particularly indignant about the quality of towels. Blankets present a similar problem, she said, and she criticized the disparity between the contents of varying sizes of containers of merchandise, including applesauce and crackers.

"Substitutions are made," she said, "but the consumer doesn't know when."

Mrs. Belester, describing herself as a typical American housewife, said family expenditures last year were $220 for food, $113 for coal, $121 for utilities, $18 for transportation, $22 for insurance, and $73 for maintenance of the family automobile, a 1927 model which "gets around."

$38 a Year on Clothes

Mrs. Belester testified in her capacity as secretary of the united conference against the high cost of living.

"Last year my husband earned $600," she said.

"Where did the other $540 come from?" asked Don Montgomery, consumers counsel of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration.

"I rented rooms in our home," she said. "My husband and I lived in the basement and slept in the attic, so that other rooms would be available for renting."

Her family spent only $38 for clothing last year, she said. For her husband, she said, she purchased a polo shirt, socks, underwear and shoes.

Catholic University Honors Dr. Behrendt For His 17 Years' Service as Glee Club Director

Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick (left), vice rector of Catholic University, last night presented Dr. Leo Behrendt, director of the university's glee club, with a silver plaque in honor of his 17 years of service to the club. Miss Hazel Arth, soloist, is shown with them

Beaming with pride after receiving two silver gifts in honor of a triple anniversary, Director Leo Behrendt of the Catholic University Glee Club last night stepped off the platform and said, "It makes me feel old."

First presentation, a silver plaque in honor of Dr. Behrendt's 17 years of service to the club of which he was cofounder, was made by the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of the university. Similar plaques will be presented every year by the Glee Club to that one of its alumni members who has most distinguished himself ten years after graduation.

Dr. Behrendt's silver jubilee as a teacher at the university prompted the Alumni Glee Club members to give him a silver service. William T. Hannan made the presentation "to the exacting and maybe austere Dr. Behrendt of the classroom and the jovial and genial Dr. Behrendt of the glee club."

The third anniversary was the golden jubilee of Catholic University, the occasion of a special concert by the glee club. Nearly 800 persons crowded the auditorium on the second floor of McMahon Hall, overflowing into the hall and up the stairs, to hear a program of sacred, secular and sentimental songs. Miss Hazel Arth was guest artist.

Textile Union Cuts CIO Ties, Rejoins AFL

By International News Service.

The American Federation of Labor yesterday bestowed a charter upon the United Textile Workers, a large seceding faction from the Congress of Industrial Organizations which, in a three-day special convention ended yesterday, cut all its C. I. O. ties in favor of re-entry in the federation.

At the same time, Francis J. Gorman, of Providence, R. I., president of the U. T. W. and leader of the return movement, resigned his office. He was succeeded by Council M. Fox, 36, of Atlanta and Savannah, Ga., prominent young federation organizer.

Although Gorman insisted his resignation was entirely voluntary and that he would remain active in organizing textile workers, he was understood to have stepped aside as one of the conditions imposed by William Green, A. F. of L. president, before granting of the new charter.

It was said Green dictated a "new deal" for the returning textile workers, estimated to number possibly 200,000.

Gorman, in a letter to a U. T. W. committee, said he was resigning to prove there would be no "self-seekers" or political opportunists in the new textile affiliation with the federation.

A new slate of officers, headed by Fox, was installed. It included John Pollard, Spartansburg, S. C., first vice president; Joseph Sylvia, Providence, second vice president; Edwin Van Nasse, Holyoke, Mass., third vice president; Gordon Chastain, Spartansburg, fourth vice president; Miss Carrie Gallagher, Cleveland, fifth vice president, and Arthur Valente, Lawrence, Mass., secretary-treasurer.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Janet Bracken, lyric soprano (Reino Luoma, accompanist), and Herbert Donaldson, pianist, give a joint recital in Masonic Auditorium Wednesday night for the benefit of Northeast Rescue Mission.

Making their first appearance here in a benefit recital, two young artists from the Middle West, Janet Bracken and Herbert Donaldson, deserved a larger audience than the one that greeted them last evening in Masonic Auditorium. They were fortunate, however, in that the auditors were appreciative of talent and rewarded them with attentive listening and a growing warmth of approval.

In her opening group of songs by Scarlatti, Grieg, Wolf and Veracini, Miss Bracken made an immediate impression of vocal competence and personal charm. Her lyric soprano is excellently placed and trained, and its quality is pure and delightful. Sustained by admirable breath control, her voice has pliability in phrasing and clarity of tone throughout its range. Its delicacy of shading was particularly pleasing in "Ein Schwan" and "Auf ein altes Bild."

Her second group contained Bainbridge Crist's arrangement of "C'est mon ami," Pierne's "Le Moulin" and Charpentier's "Depuis le Jour," from "Louise." While these disclosed her versatility in interpretation and technical ease, her finest singing was reserved for the final group. There was appealing emotional cogency in Rakhmaninov's "O Thou Billowy Harvest Field," wistful tenderness in Strickland's "At Eve I Heard a Flute," and a contagious excitement in Horsman's "Bird of the Wilderness" and Rummel's "Ecstasy."

Miss Bracken is a young singer whose progress should reward watching. Her security in tone production, her fluent treatment of the melodic line, her accuracy of attack and her control of tone are merits to be praised.

Herbert Donaldson's share of the program consisted of Rummel's transcription of a Bach chorale-prelude, Harold Bauer's version of Franck's organ Prelude, Fugue and Variation; Ravel's Sonatine, and four Etudes of Chopin. Soundly grounded in technique, he plays with a justified assurance and clarity in exposition. His style is forthright, and his interpretative finesse does not yet match his range of dynamics. He seems to have a preference for forte and fortissimo, though he can command a light and persuasive touch.

Claude Robeson directs the Rubinstein Club in its second concert of the season Wednesday night in the Willard Hotel ballroom, with Mary Bothwell as guest soloist.

An enjoyable concert was presented by the Rubinstein Club of women's voices last evening in the Willard Hotel ballroom which was filled, as usual, by patrons and friends of the organization. Claude Robeson conducted the well-trained group of singers in a varied program which consisted mostly of arrangements, the exceptions being "Afferentur Regi Virgines" by the late Abel L. Gabert and "In the Boat" by Reinhold Herman.

Beginning with Ryder's vocal treatment of one of Mendelssohn's "Lieder ohne Worte," the arrangements included Bantock's "Silent Strings;" Strauss' "Tales of the Vienna Woods;" Nevin's "Before the Daybreak;" Franz' "Marie" and Rubinstein's "Good Night."

The guest artist of the evening was Mary Bothwell, of New York, who made three appearances. Her choice of operatic excerpts touched upon "Die Walkuere," "Tannhauser" and Handel's "Radamisto," which were alternated with songs by Rurante, Wagner, Richard Strauss, Stuart Ross, Leo Russotto, Ethel Glen Hier and Elinor Ramich Warren.

Miss Bothwell has a good dramatic soprano voice and technical facility in its use. In range of volume and emotional coloring, she showed an aptitude for convincing interpretation. Her upper tones, however, are not always round and unconstricted nor is her control of breath yet fully mastered.

Parents at Sea, Princesses Have Big Day at Zoo

London, May 10.—With mamma and papa—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth—far out on the Atlantic, en route to Canada and the United States, 13-year-old Princess Elizabeth and her 9-year-old sister, Princess Margaret Rose, had a big time today at the London Zoo.

With three little girl friends they rode elephants and camels, watched Pinda, the baby panda, drink milk from a bottle and stand on its head, held live cubs in their arms and stood by as the penguins were fed.

Brains Becoming Too Big, Slipping, Doctor Theorizes

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—Evidence that civilized man may be committing mental suicide by overdeveloping his brain was reported today before the American Psychiatric Association.

The present generation of "jitterbugs" and swing dancers may be an indication of a slipping of the human mind just as "the great dancing epidemics of the middle ages" were the forerunners of a decadent period, Dr. Paul Schilder, of New York, declared.

In general the oldest civilized people have the largest number of persons with mental defects, he added.

Wars and other major upheavals in society may be both a result of mental disturbances among a large number of people and a cause of additional neuroses and insanity, Dr. Schilder said.

U. S. Coast Guard Pay Clerk Held In $30,000 Theft

By the Associated Press.

Coast Guard headquarters announced last night that Pay Clerk Joseph A. Harris, a warrant officer attached to the cutter Chelan, one of three American cutters in the International Iceberg Patrol, had been arrested at Moncton, N. Harris was seized at 6 o'clock last night at Moncton. Officials said most of the money was recovered, adding that Harris probably would be taken to Boston for trial in a Federal court.

He had served 20 years in the Coast Guard and was quartered at Halifax, N. B., where the Chelan is based during service with the ice patrol.

Nobody Home

IF YOU'RE LOOKING for a fourth for bridge, or company to the movies—don't call up that friend who bought a Nash.

His house is dark. The door is locked. Something has happened to him!

He's been shanghaied—by a car that refuses to stay in a garage.

And that's the way it happens. So quickly that often you don't have time to grab your coat.

There's your new Nash—long and rakish, gay and glittering, so restless it can hardly stay at the curb.

Next thing you know, you're out of town with your heart singing with excitement.

There's a new kind of engine up in front that acts like a thoroughbred stinging under a spur. There's a wheel in your hands, and gears* beneath your fingers, that are almost as quick as thought. And before you catch your breath, a *Fourth Speed cuts in . . . and the fun begins all over again.

For, suddenly, you haven't an engine. You don't hear it or catch the slightest tremor in the floorboard. But the telephone poles begin ticking by, in a new and furious tempo.

Then begins that phantom-flight that ever afterwards makes any other car seem tame.

For hills and valleys flash by like scenes in a beautiful dream. The bumps are gone. The ruts are smoothed away.

There isn't even any dust or draft to spoil your experience. A magical little "Weather Eye"* that filters the air automatically takes care of that—makes coat and gloves unnecessary in a Nash the year 'round.

And if wanderlust gets the better of you—if you can't get that proud hood headed home—well, just park beneath a star and go to bed.

For it's that simple with a Nash. With its convertible bed, you can live in it—anywhere—for weeks on end.

Too bad you're missing all the fun that Nash owners have . . .

If it's money that's holding you back—forget it! For here's the simple, certified truth: Nash has ten beautiful models priced next to the lowest . . . models that hold the Gilmore-Yosemite economy record in their class, with 21.25 miles to the gallon.

And, as everybody knows, you can't make a Nash quit!

So—what's holding you back? Come down and try it!

It's that new NASH

Civic Leaders Praise Street At Dinner

'Vision and Method' Of Retiring Welfare Chief Lauded Before 200 Guests

Elwood Street, retiring director of Public Welfare, was praised last night at a testimonial dinner by representatives of civic and social agencies of the National Capital for constantly seeking "to push out community frontiers and better social conditions."

Emphasis was placed on Street's ability as an organizer and "a real builder with both a vision and a method" by Coleman Jennings, president of the Community Chest.

"Eleven years ago the Community Chest brought Street to Washington," Hennings said, "and largely as the result of his inspiration and zeal it is a spiritually, morally and ethically more beautiful place to live in, for it is . . . more socially conscious."

Praised by Others

Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, president of the Council of Social Agencies, extolled Street's early work with the Community Chest. She declared the "Chest has meant more to Washington than it could to any other city, since it is the only effort which could bring us together in a great social organization."

The community program of social work undertaken under Street's direction, both by the Community Chest and the Board of Public Welfare was held to be a "service to all the people in proportion to their need" by Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, executive secretary of the colored Y. M. C. He said he brought the "good wishes and gratitude of 170,000 Washington residents" who hoped Street would find opportunities for equal service in his new post as director of the Richmond Community Chest.

Denies "Rubber Stamp"

In reply, Street stressed the value of social work in 'making democracy work," and denounced statements that the Board of Public Welfare is a rubber stamp as "one of the silliest things I ever heard."

"If I ever saw a rubber stamp alive and wiggling all the time it is the Board of Public Welfare," he asserted.

Other speakers were Frederick McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare; Newbold Noyes, executive associate editor of the Evening Star; Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department; William H. Savin, president of the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers, and Walter S. Ufford, former director of the Associated Charities. Mrs. David Cushner, of the Civic Theater, presented a monologue on the purposes of social work, and Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, presided.

Street was presented with a book signed by the 200 guests at the dinner, and Mrs. Street was given a traveling bag "to encourage her to come and see us often."

Today's final session will be devoted to talks by Stewart MacDonald, Federal housing administrator, and Steve Hannagan, of New York.

Dr. Sheehy will discuss the influence of foreign propaganda, forces tending to disturb friendly relations between the United States and her southern neighbors, and some proposal for establishing closer cultural and spiritual relations.

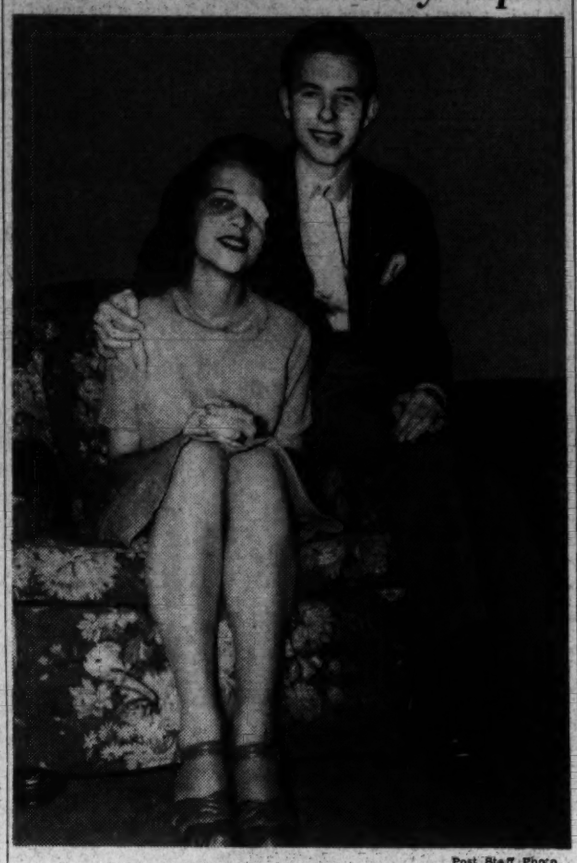

A dinner will be held by the club before the address and public reception. Moving pictures of a flight over Ecuador, Peru, Chile and Argentina will be shown and a musical program will follow.

Seminole Indian Sues to Hold Back $95,000 From U. S.

Frank Harjoche, Seminole Indian, yesterday asked District Court to restrain the Department of Interior in its attempt to take $95,000 from returns from mining leases held by his tribe.

The money, to be collected on a 10 per cent of returns basis, would be used to reimburse the United States Geological Survey for mining tests made on Seminole land. Its payment was authorized by Congress in an act passed last year.

Harjoche attacked the constitutionality of the act, declaring it was in contradiction to treaties made with the Seminoles in 1898 and to a treaty modification of 1932.

Rhode Island Ave. Body Urges Extension Of Fire Protection

Indorsement of the report of Burdette G. Lewis on local relief was voted last night at a meeting of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

Following reading of a committee report by A. B. Genung, legislative chairman, the association specifically approved Lewis' recommendations barring from relief families with a monthly income of $90, transients and those on relief rolls fraudulently.

Members urged restoration of $89,000 recently lopped off Fire Department appropriations and urged extension of fire protection to newer sections of the District. Thirty-four new members were elected.

Michigan Park

By unanimous vote the Michigan Park Citizens Association last night urged the proposed rezoning of the section to bar erection of apartment houses, hospitals and philanthropic institutions, and commercial establishments from residential A to residential ASR areas.

Members also went on record as requesting the Board of Education to develop six acres southeast of the Bunker Hill School as a natural amphitheater and playground. Another resolution asked establishment of a traffic light at Twelfth and Michigan avenue northeast.

According to Hoagland the men hailed him at Twelfth and H streets northeast, ordered him to drive to Twenty-first and Q streets northwest. There the bandits forced Hoagland out of the cab after robbing him and drove off. The taxi was later recovered in the 1700 block of Twenty-second street northwest.

120,861 on U. S. Rolls Here in March, a Record

The number of Federal employes in the District in March—120,861—was an increase of 416 over the preceding month and an all-time high for the service here, the Civil Service Commission announced.

Employment and pay rolls in the executive branch otherwise showed what was described as a "seasonal increase" in March. There were 876,679 civil employes, an increase of 3,138 or 0.4 per cent since February. The March pay roll was $134,626,233, as compared to $130,231,207 for February.

The greater increase in pay roll as compared to the increase in personnel was because the large number of per diem and per hour employes earned more in March than in February through the greater number of working days in March.

3 Snakes Startle U. Md. Audience, But Not Much

The audience at the University of Maryland Footlight Club's production of "You Can't Take It With You" were startled last night by the appearance of three live snakes on the stage.

A garter snake and two black snakes, inclosed in a glass cage, were part of the staging. Co-director Ralph Williams said the reptiles were borrowed from the Washington Zoo.

"The professional companies used mechanical snakes operated by a push-button, but we like to be realistic," he said.

Squaw Was Boss In Creek Tepees, Data Reveals

The Creek Indian brave was not the household czar that all Indian husbands were supposed to be, according to hitherto unavailable data disclosed yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

A bulletin reveals that the Creek brave had nothing to do with the disciplining and education of his own children and had no authority in his wife's house, though he was allowed to be boss in the house of his sister and her husband if he chose.

This and other previously unpublished facts were collected by the late J. N. B. Hewitt, of the Bureau of American Ethnology, in 1881-1882, before white influences had seriously changed the aboriginal institutions of the Creeks' settlement in Oklahoma.

Playground Shift Fought By Overton

He Favors Board Of Recreation and Opposes 'Piecemeal Reorganization'

Transfer of the playground department to the schools, as approved by the House in the 1940 District supply bill, was opposed yesterday by Chairman Overton, of the Senate Sub-Committee on District Appropriations.

Favorably impressed by the testimony of Miss Sybil Baker, director of playgrounds, at the subcommittee hearings Tuesday, Chairman Overton said he was "not inclined to the merger" and described the proposal as "piecemeal reorganization."

He said he would favor a plan to consolidate the various recreational agencies operating in the District under a representative board of recreation.

System Criticized

Criticism of the present system of playground control has been leveled against both District and Federal authorities for many years by civic and business leaders.

At present play facilities are controlled by the Playground Department, public schools, Community Center, National Parks Service and the Welfare and Recreation Association.

Overton said transfer of the Playground Department to the schools would probably eliminate "certain overlapping" of services and even produce "some reduction" in the costs, but would not solve the problem.

Wants Wide Merger

At the sub-committee hearings Miss Baker contended the merger would not include all local recreational activities and would not effect any economies. If any merger is to be made, it should cover all recreational agencies, she said. School Superintendent Frank W. Ballou told the sub-committee the Board of Education was not asking for the transfer but is willing to accept the responsibility.

The Commissioners have approved the merger, not because it places the playgrounds under the schools, but because it is a step toward consolidation of the play facilities.

Bar Asks Pacts To Restrict Air Warfare

Curb on Use of Planes Urged Unanimously By Law Section

Unrestricted air warfare and terrorization of civilians were condemned yesterday by the International and Comparative Law Section of the American Bar Association.

An international convention rigidly limiting the use of planes in war was urged in a resolution adopted after the section heard Judge Fred K. Nielsen, professor, Georgetown University, describe the world as "largely in a jungle state."

The resolution, which was unanimously approved for adoption by the American Bar Association convention, called on the State Department to work for the agreement to humanize air warfare. The proposed convention says:

"No attack by airplane shall be made for the purpose of terrorization, or under any circumstances on the civilian population," except those in military areas, who should be warned, if possible.

Airplane attack is authorized on points of military importance, which are defined as those whose destruction would be of "substantial aid" to the attacking nation, such as ammunition factories and military lines of supply.

Uneasy on Foreign Affairs

The air warfare rules are to be made part of the general orders of the armies of the nations which sign the agreement.

Uneasiness over foreign affairs was indicated by the preamble of the air warfare resolution, which pointed out that "it is of the utmost importance that while nations are at peace" rules be worked out for carrying on warfare.

The air warfare resolution was among several adopted at the annual luncheon of the international law experts at the Mayflower. The chief speaker, Judge Nielsen, served on the Mexican-American Claims Commission and on boards which arbitrated questions between this country, Turkey and Egypt.

Since the Washington Disarmament Conference of 1922, said Judge Nielsen, "the tangible results of that conference have vanished. Nations are not engaged in limiting land or naval armaments."

Cites Horrors In Spain

Judge Nielsen said disputes south of the Rio Grande had given the American Government little trouble. Referring to the Mexican seizure of oil properties, however, he called unsound the Mexican claim that this was wholly a domestic question, because the rights of aliens were involved.

Contrasting the horrors of the war in Spain with the situation in the Civil War, Judge Nielsen said that although belligerent status was accorded both sides, "some governments" revealed "little or no concern for the maintenance of well established principles of law. "The recognition given insurgents," Judge Nielsen said, "was premature in two European Governments and three Central American powers."

Concluding his address, Judge Nielsen said: "Our Government has engaged in hostilities in furtherance of national policy. And we have fought to vindicate legal rights. I do not question the sincerity or wisdom of the Declaration of War made in 1917. However, I hope that in any future conflict, whether we shall fight alone or in conjunction with others, whether resort to arms shall be justified on grounds of policy or of law, the awful stem may have a justification, which in the good conscience of our people can and will be solemnly proclaimed."

Among those at the meeting who supported the resolution demanding rules for air warfare was Col. John H. Wigmore, dean of Northwestern University, and revered as the greatest American authority on the law of evidence.

Welcomed by Hogan

Frank Hogan, of Washington, president of the American Bar Association, welcomed the international law experts with a speech which began in pleasantries but concluded with a tribute to their specialty as a branch of law "founded upon the honor of nations."

Other resolutions approved by the section included:

A declaration that the oil expropriation dispute with Mexico ought to be referred to an international tribunal for adjudication unless the oil lands are restored to their owners or they are paid promptly.

A recommendation that double taxation of inheritances be eliminated by treaty.

Indorsement of an Institute of Comparative Law for the Americas to be established to study the laws of North, Central and South America.

Recommendation that a uniform code of commercial law for the Pan-American countries be drawn up and considered at the Pan-American Conference at Bogota, Columbia, in 1943.

Recommendation that all available foreign housing laws be collected for comparison with American State and national laws.

Increase in Births as Wealth Declines Glaringly Obvious in Sectional Study of D. C.

GENERAL DEATH RATE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, 1937
(Census Tract of Residence of Deceased)

This is fifth in a series of articles on social and health conditions in the Capital. The sixth will appear tomorrow.

By Eugene Pharo.

Basing its maps on statistics for 1937, the research department of the Washington Council of Social Agencies gives details by census tracts for birth and deaths in the Capital.

While the birth rate for the city is lower than that for the United States, and its death rate is higher, harsh contrasts develop between neighborhoods and sections. There are neighborhoods where the birth rate is much higher, as well as those where it is much lower than for the country as a whole. And the same thing is true of the death rate.

Although the circumstance has become a commonplace of society over the past several decades, the inversion of rates for birth as related to economic capacity, is glaringly obvious in Washington.

Birth Rate Low

For the city as a whole the birth rate for 1937 was 15.32 per 1,000 estimated population, and this rate was 10 per cent greater than the death rate, the latter being 13.91 per 1,000. The research department points out that if there were no migration into or out of the city this would mean a natural annual increase in population of 14 per 10,000 inhabitants. This contrasts with the natural increase of the population of the United States, computed on the same basis, of 58, which is more than four times that of the Capital.

In 1937, 8,723 persons died in Washington, of whom 1,001 were non-residents. Of the remaining 7,722 deaths, 1,581 or approximately 20 per cent occurred in ten census tracts inhabited by only 15 per cent of the District's population. They were in the most densely populated areas, four of them in the lowest rental sections, and all had a high percentage of over-crowded dwelling units and included neighborhoods with the most inadequate sanitary equipment.

More in Poor Sections

In four of the ten tracts, the council reported, 70 per cent of the population was white, and in four more than 70 per cent was colored. The one thing common to both was poor housing and low incomes.

For the United States as a whole in 1937 the birth rate was 17 per 1,000 population, and the death rate was 11.2. At the same time the birth rate in some census tracts in Washington ran from as low as 4.22, in the most prosperous sections of the city, to as high as 46.64 in the poorer sections. Death rates ranged from 33.05 per 1,000 population to as low as 6.21. In deaths, the higher rates were in most cases in the poorer sections.

A Wide Variance

In seventeen tracts above Pennsylvania and New York avenues, and between Fourteenth street and Rock Creek, the birth rate ranged from as low as 2.96 to as high as 9.76, but in no case as high as ten. Above Florida avenue this section widened out to Eleventh street, and then to Fifth.

On the other hand in tracts in the Northeast part of the city and in the Southeast and Southwest sections, as well as toward the center of the city, the birth rate mounted into the twenties and thirties.

Tigers Snap Losing Streak, Beat Nats, 5 to 1

Johnstown a Mudder, Says Fitzsimmons

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, May 10.—There is probably exultation in Boston as the Red Sox continue to head the New York Yankees for the league lead, but Jack Doyle, the Broadway betting commissioner, apparently is unmoved. The Yankees are still 2-to-5 shots to win the pennant in his book.

POVICH

We know what Doyle would say if asked for his opinion of the American League race at this writing. Betcha he'd say:

"Joe McCarthy and his Yankees are like Jimmy Stout and Johnstown in my book. All McCarthy and Stout have to do is sit tight.

The trouble with the American League seems to be a lack of left-handed pitchers. A check-up shows that of the five games the Yankees have lost, four were suffered at the hands of left-handers—Chase and Krakauskas of the Nats, Milnar of the Indians, and Smith, of the White Sox.

This ought to be rather significant. Chase and Krakauskas in the past have often exerted a mastery over the Yanks, but Milnar and Smith, in the parlance of the rack track, "woke up" to beat the New York club. Milnar is the big southpaw who has been shuttling back and forth from Cleveland to the minors for four years and never did startle anybody with his pitching. This Smith, of Chicago, in case you don't know, is Edgar Smith who only last week wasn't good enough for Connie Mack's A's and was sent to the White Sox at the waiver price.

Only Righthander to Beat Yanks

Dutch Leonard, who has been knocked out of the box twice since winning his first two starts, has one distinction at least. He's the only right-hander to beat the Yanks this season.

It must have been logically arrived at in the long experience of big league managers, but the theory that a left-handed batting order has an edge over right-handed pitching, was pretty well blasted at Briggs Field this afternoon.

Bucky Harris set some kind of a record today when he wrote on the line-up slip he handed to the umpires at game time a list of eight left-handed hitters. George Case, the lead-off man, was the only right-handed swinger in the batting order. Yet against the right-handed pitching of Tommy Bridges the Nats were limited to a paltry five hits.

With his club having lost six straight on the recoil of its five-game winning streak, Harris now threatens to draw tomorrow's batting order out of a hat. Back in 1926, he tried that trick and with his most potent slugger, Goose Goslin, leading off the line-up, and Muddy Ruel batting cleanup, Harris snapped a losing streak.

Saved From the Texas League

The current idol of Detroit fans is young Barney McCosky, a home-town lad, who is now a bright fixture in the Tigers' outfield, and sporting a .370 batting average. As far as McCosky and the Tigers' management is concerned, it is all very surprising.

At Lakeland, Fla., this spring, McCosky created very little interest in himself in a battle for an outfield job. The Tigers had snatched him out of a Detroit high school two years before and sent him to Beaumont, calling him to the Lakeland camp without much hope that he would amount to a big leaguer.

That impression was undisturbed throughout the first six weeks of training, and a return ticket to Beaumont had already been purchased for McCosky. On his scheduled last day in camp, the lad got another chance to play and that afternoon he hit a home run, a double and a single. His train reservations were quickly canceled and he was in the outfield again the next afternoon. That day he made three hits in four times at bat.

The lad is somewhat of an opportunist. Against Bob Feller in the Tigers' first game at Cleveland, McCosky slammed a home run and a single for two of the Tigers' three hits. There is a suspicion here that he is the prize rookie of 1939.

Unofficially Led the League

McCosky's case is more than slightly reminiscent of the case of Taft Wright as a Washington outfielder. Like McCosky, Wright was an ugly duckling in the Nats' training camp last season. At best there was the chance that he might be carried as a utility outfielder.

And then on a day which found the Nats swinging North and scheduled to play their farm team at Greenville, S. C., the outfield was so boggy that Bucky Harris benched his regular outfielders, equipped rookies with high-laced football shoes and gave them the jobs.

That day Wright hit a home run, a double and two singles. Harris began to renew interest in the lad. The next day, at Charlotte, Wright hit another home run. The next day at Richmond, he hit his third homer in three days. When the season ended last year, Wright was an established regular, boasting the best batting average in the league, not excluding Jimmy Foxx's .349 which earned him the batting championship. Only Wright's failure to play in more than 100 games deprived him of Foxx's title.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 10.—Yoiks, Buford! Something's gone wrong with the Gehrig-Dahlgren scenario, and unless somebody yells for a rewrite man pretty soon the good old fans who feed on sports fiction are going to start boycotting the Yankees as unfair to organized hack writers.

CONSIDINE

It was shock enough for them to find that virtue is not necessarily triumphant, as witness the decline of Gehrig. He took better care of himself than any man who ever played baseball. Never, from Double-day down to the rawest modern rookie, has a man slept, talked, eaten and lived baseball as cleanly and conscientiously as Looie. Yet he went in a comparative hurry, years before his borrowed time began, and years sooner than a lot of stew-bum roustabouts whose idea of getting in shape was to stop drinking beer as a chaser after their morning gin.

However, the disciples of sports fiction might absorb even that twist of the plot, but when the lean, lithe kid steps in as a substitute, the kid with clear blue eyes and a slant to his jaw that looks good in the illustrations—and strikes out—that's going too far.

As this piece is being chiseled in the granite of time, Babe Dahlgren, Lou's young sub, is hitting a blistering .176, a figure that might be some kind of a record failure for a Yankee if it weren't for the fact that Gehrig, before his resignation, amassed a stunning figure of ineptitude, to wit, .143.

Sensitive Guy . . . That's Lou Gehrig

Lou got a boo a couple days before he resigned. It was in the New York-Philadelphia game. He rolled into a double play or so and a few bums gave him the salute sinister, adding "we want Dahlgren." Well, they've got Dahlgren now. So, apparently, have the American League pitchers.

The Yankees could win the pennant with Gehrig in the lineup even if his batting mark fell below the .000 mark. They could win with Fanny Ward and the Maharajah of Rajpipla, a gouty soul, as the No. 1 battery. For this reason—and in view of Dahlgren's own deplorable slump—it is interesting to search for the reason why Gehrig remains on the bench. The probable answer is that he is a very sensitive guy. He told me once that during the height of slumps he would throw himself on a bed and cry for an hour or two, from the sheer frustration of it all. He very probably was embarassed to the point of being in agony, over his inability to move any faster than a steer in a marsh. There's not much doubt either that the strained silences, as well as the occasional hurrays that his teammates gave him, when he came back to the bench after a deed, induced him to retire.

Joe McCarthy, as well as being the best handler of ball players I've ever seen, is a lucky fellow when it comes to turning the pets of his team out to pasture. Babe Ruth represented the greatest menace McCarthy will ever have. He was the idol of millions and most of the millions believed that it was Babe's constitutional right to walk in and get the job as manager of the Yankees. So believed Babe, but the big guy bungled it in such a way that Col. Ruppert, and a great section of the fans, were instantly all for McCarthy.

Lou Will Be Back, Says Writer

Then it came along time for another popular hero on the team to get fired. We mean, Tony Lazzeri. So Lazzeri, himself, made a kind of premature deal with the Cubs and McCarthy was saved the pain of coming up to a guy who had been terrific for years and saying, "You're through." Gehrig's case is in point. If McCarthy had broken Gehrig's streak, and Dahlgren had proved, as he has, to be only faintly more effective, a certain segment of the populace would have had the chiv out of Joe. But Gehrig was the one who benched himself.

Some of the spies with the Yankees will bet you that Gehrig never plays another game, but that just doesn't seem possible. Everybody knows that at his extreme nadir, Lou Gehrig will hit more than Dahlgren's present average. Despite the fiction writers, it's asking the impossible of Dahlgren to go in there and biff for the old A. C. with any degree of consistency. It might have been different if he had been playing, even in the minors, but the fellow has been dry rotting on the Yankee bench for a couple of years, and the only pitching he has been swinging at has been those easy tosses from the batting practice pitchers. They don't throw high hard ones, or roll 'em off the end of a table, in that batting-practice league.

Our own hunch is that Lou will be back, hit perhaps .285 for the season, which will be more than enough, and that the sun soon will bestir the crusted sap in his legs. And that the clean-limbed blue-eyed young sub—with the fires of youth and determination shining radiantly in his eyes—will feel his way back again to his familiar indent on the end of the bench.

Ciencia Impressive; Challendon, Maryland Hope, Breezes Mile; Volitant in Workout

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., May 10.—Five of the seven horses expected to be named in the entry box for Saturday's Preakness worked out today. In the morning, the mighty Johnstown, winner of the Kentucky Derby, took a drill followed by time trial for Challenge, his stablemate. Shortly after these two performed, the Saratoga Stable's Volitant went a mile and a furlong.

Between races during the afternoon, W. L. Brann's Challedon, second in the Derby, and the King Ranch's Ciencia, the only filly slated to start in the Preakness, showed the Dixie Handicap crowd their flying hoofs.

Add to these five horses the names of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Impound and the Wheatley Stable's Gilded Knight and you have the full entry list for Saturday classic. The only others even considered for the big test, T. M. Dorsett and Day Off, were eliminated late today when they were shipped to New York. Word from New York is to the effect that Trainer Earl Sande will not ship Heather Broom down for the Preakness.

Fractional Times Listed

Johnstown—0:25 2-5; 0:38 2-5; 0:52; 1:05 4-5; 1:19; 1:44 2-5.
Challenge—0:25; 0:37 4-5; 1:04 2-5; 1:16 3-5; 1:30 3-5; 1:42 4-5; 1:59.
Volitant—0:24 2-5; 0:36 2-5; 1:02 2-5; 1:14 3-5; 1:28; 1:41 2-5; 1:55 2-5.
Challedon—0:25; 0:50; 1:02; 1:14 4-5; 1:28 3-5; 1:41 4-5.
Ciencia—0:23 3-5; 0:47 3-5; 1:00 2-5; 1:12 2-5; 1:29 2-5; 1:40; 1:55 3-5.

Trainer "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons was in the infield watching the workouts of his charges, Johnstown and Challenge. He wanted the Derby winner to work faster, but Jockey Jimmy Stout missed the signal. However, Fitzsimmons was satisfied with the drill.

Starts Regardless

After the workout he said that there seems to be some mistake about Johnstown's mud-running ability. He said that the son of Jamestown would start Saturday regardless of conditions and that some of those who have doubted that the big horse can step on an off track will get the show of their lives if the oval is not fast.

Challenge's name will be put in the entry box on Friday morning, just as it was for the Derby. If the track is fast, the Challenger II colt will be withdrawn as was the case at Louisville. If the mud comes Saturday, Fitzsimmons will have a three-horse entry.

Ciencia's Drill Impressive

Ciencia's drill was impressive despite the fact that she appeared to be tired at the close. She went into action along with a stablemate which dropped out after a quarter. The filly stepped along under a snug wrap and handled her speed well.

Canoe Paddling Situation Looking Up as Season Approaches

Paddling Situation Looking Up At Washington Canoe Club

By Al Hailey.

The Washington canoe paddling situation was offered yesterday as one worthy of the attention of all who pine for bulging biceps, deep chests, broad shoulders and a general shaping up of physique and character.

Turning out for a warm-up crew practice at their club near Key Bridge, oarsmen and tilters of the Washington Canoe Club answered as one when the advantages of paddling were questioned.

"You'd be surprised at what it will do to your shoulders," confided William Haven, jr., for three years national canoe tilting champion.

"In the four-man racers, the stroke averages around 80 per minute, as compared with 35 a minute for the regular eight-man shell," he said.

Result of all this is a steady development of the chest and shoulders and general good health, said club members, who include men on the shady side of 40 and those still in their early 20s.

As members took to the water for the club's thirty-fourth year of canoe racing, Vice Commodore Edward Gray spoke briefly on the problems of a coach.

In effect, Gray tells his crew men to go out and paddle but not to go near the water, for when the oarsmen are trained to a fine point a swim can do much damage. In addition to worrying about keeping the men out of the water, Gray worries about getting men for the crews. He also said he could always get up a nice batch of worries if anybody really cared.

Main problem of the club at present is getting in shape for the races of the Middle States division of the American Canoe Association, to be held this summer on the Potomac course.

Canoe enthusiasts all along the Potomac, however, informed that the paddling situation is looking up, is here to stay and promises to hit a new high this year.

"I am looking forward to our most active year," George Hernan, president of the Potomac Boat Club, down the river from the canoe club, said yesterday. The boat club, preparing for its summer racing season, is undergoing repairs. Workmen are to complete an 80-foot float and 14 runways at the boat club this week.

Topping off their arguments as to the benefits derived from paddling, Canoe Club members introduced their Exhibit A yesterday—Harry Knight, who has been a member since 1914 and at 52 is still rowing a hefty stroke.

Knight, who went to the finals in 1936 in tryouts for the United States Olympic team, went to the Olympics in Paris in 1924 and with his brother, Carl, won the tandem doubles event.

While membership of the Canoe Club numbers about 100, the active crew men are limited to about 15, including Knight, Ebby Trilling, William Havens, jr., Kenneth Romjue, William Johnson, Ward Fleharty, Ed Gray, Charles Schulte, Gene Cleary, George Robison, John Smith, John Long, Herman Vollmer and Jack Austin.

Middies Falter After Tying Score In 8th; Powers Star

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, May 10.—Georgetown University shoved over two runs in the ninth inning here today to defeat Navy, 8-6, in a close but loosely played baseball game. The Hoyas who snapped a three-game losing streak, were trailing, 5-0, going into the fourth inning, but emerged from the frame with a 6-5 lead.

The Middies tied the count in the eighth, but lanky Vinnie Powers, winning Georgetown pitcher, started the ninth with a single and scored the decisive run on a single by George Pajak.

Johns Hopkins Beats Gallaudet

Johns Hopkins defeated Gallaudet, 88-38, yesterday in a dual track meet at Kendall Green. The visitors piled up first places in 12 of the 15 events, led by a bespectacled gent named Glazer, who won the 100 and 220 dashes and the broad jump.

Stevens, lanky Gallaudet ace, won the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 9 inches.

Two Homers Beat Browns For Yankees

New York 'Leads' League Yet Doesn't In Percentage Figures

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 10.—The New York Yankees went about their business like champions today, smacking two of Johnny Marcum's pitches for home runs in the first inning and beating the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 1.

Although the score put the Bronx bombers half a game ahead of the idle Boston Red Sox in the matter of games won and lost, it still left them in second place in the American League percentages, .706 to .714.

Singles by Frank Crosetti and Red Rolfe set the stage for big Bill Dickey's second home run of the season and this in turn was followed by George Selkirk's fourth of the year.

This four-run margin was padded with single scores in the third, fourth and seventh frames as the Yanks kept nipping away at the offerings of Marcum, Howard Mills and Fred Johnson.

Lefty Gomez started for the Yankees, but a muscular cold and a stiffness in his shoulder and back forced him to quit after retiring one batter in the first inning.

Two Errors, 12 Hits Beat Krakauskas

Wasdell Gets Two Hits as Bridges Wins Fourth in Row With Five-Hit Game

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., May 10.—The Nats broke a losing streak today, but unhappily it wasn't their own. It was the Detroit Tigers', and the Nats snapped it at seven in a row by conferring a 5-1 victory on the Detroit club.

Thus there was no interruption to the lack of success which has characterized the Washington athletes of late. Today they collected their sixth straight licking, before 4,200 Detroit fans, and coincidentally inherited the unfashionable Tie-For-Fifth place apartment in the American League subdivision.

Tommy Bridges didn't give the Nats much encouragement this afternoon. In the course of registering his fourth straight victory of the season, he restricted the Nats to a mere five hits, despite the fact that Manager Bucky Harris had packed the Washington line-up with eight left-handed hitters—or should we say batsmen?

Damaging Errors

As if the Nats' futility against Bridges were not enough to contend with, Joe Krakauskas, who was pitching a tolerable game for the Nats, was hamstrung by his colleagues in the field. George Case and Buddy Myer contributed a pair of damaging errors, and Buddy Lewis came up with a weird play that was directly responsible for the first Detroit run.

Krakauskas was no ball of fire, what with the Tigers making 12 hits before he was retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth, but with reasonable support he would have limited the Detroits to only two runs.

Bridges was apparently undisturbed by the freakish Washington batting order which presented an unbroken array of eight left-handed hitters following Lead-off Man George Case, the only right-handed swinger in the lineup. He yielded a tainted run to the Nats on two hits and an error in the second inning and then he pitched three-hit ball over the remainder of the distance.

Wasdell Gets 2 Hits

Jimmy Wasdell collected two of the Nats' five hits, and Jake Early, Buddy Myer and George Case each reached Bridges for a hit. The rest of the Nats were as punchless as Venus de Milo.

The early developments were very misleading, what with the Nats going out and getting a run in the second inning, after Buddy Myer singled, Charley Gehringer, of all people, dropped Sammy' West's

Cards Win Tie for N. L. Lead as Reds Lose

Cincinnati Defeated By Dodgers

Brooklyn Twice Comes From Behind To Win, 10-5; Cards Defeat Phillies, 4-3

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 10.—The Dodgers came from behind twice today, the second time with a seven-run splurge which drove Lloyd Moore from the mound and gave Brooklyn a 10 to 5 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

As a result of this defeat and St. Louis' victory at Philadelphia, the Reds were dropped into a tie for first with the Cardinals.

Cincinnati scored all five runs in the first two innings off Rookie Whitlow Wyatt, whose record of three wins and no losses was left unchanged when Ira Hutchinson went to the hill in the seventh and took credit for his first victory.

A triple by Bill Werber, a pass to Eddie Joost and Stan Bordagaray's safe bunt opened the game with a run for the Reds and Willard Hershberger's single brought in the second.

Moore struck out ten and, except for the first and seventh frames, was always in control. His balk scored the Dodgers' first run after Goody Rosen singled and Pete Coscarart doubled. Then Babe Phelps' homer also brought in Coscarart.

Card Win, Gain Tie for 1st Place

Philadelphia, May 10.—The St. Louis Cardinals went into a National League tie for first place with the Cincinnati Reds today by defeating the Phillies in the first of a two-game series, 4 to 3.

It was a close pitchers' battle from the start with Lon Warneke besting Claude Passeau to win his third victory of the year, although Bowman came to his rescue in the ninth. Jimmy Brown and Joe Medwick led the Cards' attack with three hits each.

Local Boy Makes Good—Catches Ball Going 125 Miles an Hour

Tigers Rally In 8th, Beat Eagles, 13-6

Hampden-Sydney Scores Seven Runs In Single Inning

After allowing only there hits in the first seven innings, Moe Brown, American University pitcher, blew up, and Hampden-Sydney scored seven runs to wipe out a 6-to-4 deficit and defeat the Eagles, 13 to 6, yesterday at the Georgetown Medical School Field.

Six hits, a walk, three errors and a passed ball were the makings of the Tigers' game-clinching rally. Bob Hall, who started the game as catcher, relieved Brown with two out in the eighth.

The Eagles were never ahead, always tallying their runs after Hampden-Sydney took leads. The Tigers obtained a 1-to-0 advantage in their half of the second, and the Eagles tied it when they came to bat. A. U. also matched Hampden-Sydney's three-run outburst in the sixth, but was unable to duplicate the eighth inning spree, and therein the story of its defeat.

Catcher Hay accounted for three of the winners' runs with a circuit blow with two aboard in the sixth. He also got a double in four trips to share with A. U.'s Benjamin batting honors of the game. Benjamin, third baseman, drove in three Eagle runners with a double and single. In the sixth his one-bagger tallied Stewart, who had reached base on an error, and in the seventh he doubled after Stewart had singled and Hall had got to first on a bobble, scoring both men.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,
(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Jimmy Wasdell and Joe Krakauskas were outstanding performers for the Nats despite their defeat at Detroit yesterday. To that pair goes the bulk of the latest award of points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Wasdell, four points, because he made two of the Nats' five hits, drove in their only run, and played a brilliant game at first base, digging two low throws out of the dirt.

To Krakauskas three points, because with proper support he would have held the Tigers to two runs despite the 12 hits he allowed.

To Jake Early, two points, because his eighth-inning single gave the Nats a chance to tie the score.

Eastern Beats Prep, Without Regulars, 13-1

Without a first-string player in the line-up, Eastern High's White Tide rolled ruthlessly over Georgetown Prep yesterday, 13 to 1, in a game at Garrett Park. Ted Walsh, youthful right-hander, went the distance, issued only two safeties, fanned six. Eastern rapped Eckrich and Powell for a total of 15 hits and six bases on balls.

It was a pitching duel between Walsh and Powell for the first three innings, no score being made, but in the fourth the Tide accounted for two runs. From then on it was never headed. Its biggest inning was the eighth, in which six tallies were made. Iroff's triple, the only one of the game, featured the period.

Bees Defeat Cubs; Fette Gives 3 Hits

Snap 5-Game Losing Streak; Tony Cuccinello Wrenches His Knee

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 10.—The Boston Bees snapped out of a five-game losing streak with a ten-hit batting feast today, and, behind the three-hit pitching of Lou Fette, whipped the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 2, in the series opener.

Fette walked seven men and tossed a home run ball to Manager Gabby Hartnett in the second, but aside from these lapses he was magnificent in recording his fourth straight victory.

The Cubs failed to get a hit from the time Hartnett knocked his third homer of the year until Herman tripled to open the eighth. They squeezed in their other run in the third on two walks and a wild throw by Lopez, who tossed the ball into rightfield trying to nab one of the runners.

The Bees temporarily lost the services of Tony Cuccinello, their ace second baseman, who wrenched his knee when Dick Bartell ran into him at second during an attempted double play by the Bees in the fifth inning. X-rays will be taken tomorrow to determine how long Tony will be out.

Big Towhead Fans Five and Gives Only One Pass to 1st Base

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—The Pittsburgh Pirates finally rose out of the National League cellar today on the six-hit pitching of Truett Banks Sewell, who shut out the New York Giants, 5 to 0, for the Pirates' third consecutive victory.

It was also the third triumph against one defeat for Sewell, a sophomore who will be 30 years old tomorrow. He spent the entire 1938 season riding the Buccaneers' bench, answering 17 relief calls.

Wilson Tennis Team Blanks Eastern, 7 to 0

Woodrow Wilson shut out Eastern's nine, 7 to 0, yesterday, on the Potomac Park courts for its second straight interhigh victory. The Presidents trounced Tech racqueters in their first series start last week.

Every match staged was won in straight sets, and few of the Wilson netmen allowed their opponents more than three games in any set. Tom Wadden, No. 1 player, started things with a 6—0, 6—4 triumph over Eastern's Frith, and from then on none of the matches were close. Doggett, of Wilson, took two love sets from Hall.

SINGLES—Wadden (W.) defeated Frith, 6—0, 6—4; Thorpe (W.) defeated Colcotte, 6—3, 6—0; Doggett (W.) defeated Hall, 6—0, 6—0; Gale (W.) defeated Handy, 6—2, 6—1; Pratt (W.) defeated Burns, 6—1, 6—4.

DOUBLES—Doggett and Thorpe (W.) defeated Handy and Colcotte, 6—1, 6—1; Carter and Wadden (W.) defeated Fee and Frith, 6—0, 6—1.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN

The Maryland State Fish and Game Protective Association have been having fishing expeditions and excursions to various sections of the State. The trek on Sunday, May 21, will be to the State Fish Hatchery, at Lewistown, and, in addition to the well-known beef barbecue put on in the original Frank Bentz style, the highlight of the day will be a fly and bait casting tournament. Both events to run simultaneously in separate pools.

This affair is open to everyone, although it is very advisable to make your reservations in advance. The competition is by invitation, and will be by teams representing some 25 casting organizations and Ike Walton chapters from all over the State, and from Washington as well.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter has accepted the invitation and designated George Huber as their judge—the board includes one from each organization competing—and your's truly as team captain. Why we don't know, unless it is because the captains are non-competing.

Fly-Casting Team

The team will be Don Carpenter and Ab Roe for the fly-casting events, Willard Barnsley and W. E. Killingsworth for the bait-casting, and Dr. Bill Holton, George Cook and Harold Vermeule for the all-around events. Roddy Gascoygne and Earl Milkwicks as alternates.

A letter from Crawford Savage, Ocean City, Md., saying the schools of mackerel are still lying offshore, but that they still refuse to be inveigled into taking a lure. But then, that's typical of Boston mackerel. And with them are some bluefish. Capt. Jim Lombard caught one 3-pounder. Billy Savage, the youngster who has been successful in catching one marlin after another from a small skiff, was out to the gravel beds with Jesse Bloxem and caught 80 pounds of seabass. Traps in this area are having extremely heavy lifts. But they are doing that in other sections, too. Even in the lower Chesapeake—for a card from Capt. Floyd Rollins, at Messick, says one netter took 40 blues Tuesday night weighing from 6 to 9 pounds.

With the middle of May almost at hand, and the blues making their northing, it begins to look like last season for the North Carolina coast, for we have still to receive a report from there on blues being taken on hook and line. We hope the simile stops there instead of continuing on up to our home waters, for, if you remember, we didn't have them either last year after that one little run in May along the Virginia bayshore.

We have another letter from Tommy Aitken in connection with the catch of the 244-pound broadbill swordfish by Julio Sanchez off Miami Beach ten days ago. Tommy says: "It was a female carrying ripe roe, indicating quite conclusively that these fish must spawn in Florida waters. Al Pflueger and I have both identified small specimens in previous years, not over two inches in length. This, of course, knocks an old theory of mine in the head as I have always been of the opinion that the concentration of swordfish off Cape Breton, in the Humboldt current off Chile, and at a perature in the Black Sea might indicate that they spawn in cold water.

"I have a lot of fun digging up these facts and from them evolving my own theories. The funny part of it is that I am able to disprove these same theories time and time again. I take great pleasure in fooling around with the big game fishes more from the angle of interesting scientific data than from the sport of angling, although I still think the marine sport is the most glamorous and thoroughly thrilling participation activity we have. As I have often said, our marine wildlife is still the only wildlife that is still wild."

There is little doubt but what you will continue to change your fish theories, Tommy, and, fishing is the greatest participation sport in the world today. Primarily because you, and others of the same mold, have made it so.

Indians Beat Athletics, 7-4, Behind Feller

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 20.—Bob Feller gave up 12 hits and 4 walks and was guilty of 2 wild pitches, but was effective enough today to turn in a 7-4 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics for his fifth victory of the campaign.

The speedball king, beaten only once this year, was helped by a six-run attack off Nelson Potter and Henry Pippen in the first two innings, and struck out eight batters.

Maryland's Undefeated Trackmen Rout Georgetown, 94-30

Joe Murphy Bows in '100' To Alnwick

Hoyas Win Only 3 Events, Two in Field As Terps Win Fifth Dual Meet of Season

By Jack Munhall.

Although its brilliant sophomore sprinter, Joe Murphy, unexpectedly suffered the first 100-yard defeat of his varsity career at the hands of an opponent making his competitive start this season, the University of Maryland's well-balanced track squad maintained its unbeaten record yesterday with a 94-30 victory over Georgetown in a dual meet at College Park. It was the Terrapin's fifth victory.

Murphy, slender little speedster, who scored 15 points in each of the Terps' last three meets, was beaten in a close finish by Morty Alnwick after he was jostled in a mixup at the start. Murphy, pocketed by runners, trailed the flying Alnwick until the last 25 yards when he made a gallant bid that fell short by inches. Alnwick's time of 10.3 was slow. Murphy has been running the distance consistently in 10.2 and under. Saturday he blazed it in 10 flat.

Avenges Setback

Murphy came back to avenge his setback by Alnwick in the 220 when both he and Vernon Miller led the Hoya dashman, and then capped his high-scoring individual performance with a winning effort in the broad jump, in which Alnwick was third. Murphy totaled 13 points, Alnwick, 9. Third in the individual point battle was Roy Skipton, Maryland's "forgotten" man, who has been running all season in the dust of his rivals, and John Buckley, of G. U.

Skipton captured second place in both the mile and two miles. He was the only other entry besides the winner in each event. Mason Chronister won the mile in 4:35.1 and Joe Peaslee the two-mile in 10.16. Georgetown forfeited both runs.

Georgetown's outnumbered and outclassed squad of seven runners and two field men, won only two events, other than the 100. Hilltop field men were responsible for both of these.

Joe Kilcullen was best in the shot-put with a throw of 41 feet 8 inches, and Buckley cleared 11 feet 6 inches for five points in the pole vault.

In a meet of unusually slow times, considering a bright sun and what appeared a fast track, the 49.8 posted in the 440 by Maryland's Southern Conference champion, Alan Miller, was outstanding. Miller ran one of his best races and had he been at all pressed, might have smashed the Stadium record of 48.2, established by Frank Cronin who is now coaching the Terp yearlings.

Gene Ochsenreiter, promising sophomore quarter miler, staged one of his typical driving finishes to shade Almwick for second in the event. He came wide on the outside, just as he did last Saturday when he all but upset Miller, and forced Miller to step it up in the last few yards.

Hermie Evans, Maryland's crack hurdler, was not extended in either race by the touted Georgetown stars, Charley Neumeyer and John Motzenbecker. In the 120-yard high hurdles Evans won easily, with Joe Devlin, a teammate, second, and Neumeyer third. The latter seemed to lose his stride early in the race.

Then in the 220-yard low hurdles Evans repeated his clear-cut victory, with Devlin again second, and Motzenbecker third. The Hoya cost himself a certain second by stumbling over the final timber.

ONE-MILE RUN—Won by Chronister (Maryland); second, Skipton (Maryland); no third, only two entries. Time, 4:35.1.

Episcopal High And Western Play 8-8 Tie

Raider Errors Help Maroons to Deadlock Score in Eighth

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, May 10.—Episcopal High School's nine played its second straight tie game here this afternoon, an 8—8 deadlock with Western High, which was halted in the ninth inning in diference to a prearranged time limit.

The Maroons tied up the game in the eighth when two Western errors, a single and a walk by relief hurler Nance enabled them to shove over two runs. They had pulled within striking distance of the Washingtonians in the previous frame, when four hits produced as many runs and drove Clarence Kuldall to the showers.

Episcopal outhit the visitors by a 10—6 margin, but walks and errors killed thei. chances of winning the game in the early innings. Western got off to a three-run lead in the opening frame on a single hit, two walks and two errors, while in the third the visitors scored one run without benefit of a hit, and in the fifth they completed their scoring with four runs, the result of four free passes and three successive singles.

The Maroons also profited by alien miscues, scoring single tallies in the second and third with the assistance of Western errors, while one bobble and a free pass also figured prominently in their seventh-inning uprising.

Baxter and Golden Terror Meet in Mat Feature Tonight

Two wrestling villains who claim to hate everybody—The Golden Terror and Laverne Baxter—will meet tonight at Turner's Arena in a match which promises to hit a new high in ungentlemanly tactics and general dirty work.

BAXTER

The Terror, a hooded specimen, will be making his 16th appearance here. He has never been defeated, although about the most powerful weapon he has exhibited is a peculiar muffled snarl and a terrific kicking stroke with his right foot.

Baxter, banned from the local ring more than a year ago for roughness, returned recently to re-establish himself as an object of public scorn. In two appearances here he has been fairly successful swatting one ringside fan on one occasion and changing his mind on another when a quartet of policemen loomed up.

Claiming to be the victim of four airplane crack-ups—with himself at the stick—Baxter yesterday took the usual vows that he of a certainty will unmask The Terror's overstuffed frame tonight and hurl the former night club bouncer into Row C.

The supporting card brings together Sammy Stein and Rosy Red Ryan, Chief Chewaki and Dutch Schultz, Dropkick Murphy and Gene Bowman, and Jim Clinstock and Jim Wright. Promoter Joe Turner's ticket offices are now ensconced in the arena, Fourteenth and W streets northwest, and the telephone number is Michigan 6614.

Zanelli to Fight Steve Mamakos At Stadium, May 22

Ralph Zanelli, 23-year-old Boston welterweight, yesterday was signed for the ten-round match with Steve Mamakos, Washington fighter, which will open the summer season May 22 at Griffith Stadium.

An Italian boxer, Zanelli hails from the haunts of the world's featherweight championship, Joey Archibald. He is handled by Dan Carrol, former Boston manager-trainer, and has an impressive string of victories. Since leaving the amateur ranks in 1937, Zanelli has lost only four fights and never been knocked off his feet. He held the National A. A. U. lightweight title in 1937.

A victory for Mamakos, ranked sixth in the welterweight division by the National Boxing Association, would strengthen his claim for a right at a championship match here later in the summer. Mamakos, also a former amateur fighter, has won 21 out of 23 professional matches.

H. Dettweiler Turns Pro for 'Good Will' Job

Maryland State Champ Joins Sporting Goods Firm With Mrs. Hicks

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The principal rivalries of local women's tournament play were left hanging in the air yesterday as Helen Dettweiler, the foremost figure in city, State and sectional events here for several years deserted the amateur ranks and became the country's fourth outstanding woman golf professional.

The Congressional Club champion, arch rival of Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and Marion Brown, Manor, in local events and a player of national reputation, joined Mrs. Opal Hill and Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb on the staff of the Wilson Sporting Goods Co.

The announcement was made at a luncheon given by Washington Baseball Club President Clark Griffith yesterday, and Miss Dettweiler left immediately for Chicago, where she will study golf equipment from the ground up for her new employers. She will play in the Western Women's Open before returning to the District.

Will Work Out of City

The former simultaneous holder of the Maryland, Middle Atlantic and District championships will work out of the city, in a territory from Philadelphia to Jacksonville. During the winter months she may make southern Florida her headquarters.

The 23-year-old local golf star will do good will work among scattered women's golf associations, such as helping to conduct tournaments, awarding prizes, and working with and among golfers of the fair sex the year round.

She will also do considerable radio work, as she gained experience last year as the first women's baseball commentator, traveling throughout the major league cities.

The announcement was just six days before the blonde linkswoman was to defend her Maryland State championship, seeking a third consecutive title and fourth in the past five years. She has won the District and Middle Atlantic championships twice each, the Augusta Open, a two-ball affair with Katherine Hemphill as a partner, and has made titular rounds in other tourneys. Last year she lost in the second round of the national championship.

Marion Brown and the new woman's professional staged two final round battles here and in Baltimore last year for the city and Midatlantic titles, Miss Brown winning both to create a new rivalry, after Mrs. Beckley and Miss Dettweiler were final round foes in local play for years.

Will Gain Experience

The popular women's open affair, played in the major cities throughout the country, will give Miss Dettweiler ample competitive experience. She will join Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Harb and Mildred "Babe Didrickson" Zaharias against the outstanding amateur stars in these events.

Attending the luncheon given by "Griff" and for several years a staunch supporter of the girls' golf game were Walter Johnson and Bill Coyle, radio announcers; Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, three-time president of the Women's District Golf Association; Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, present president; Mrs. Meckley, Miss Brown, Mrs. Dettweiler and local sportswriters.

Miss Dettweiler's turning pro immediately shifted the prospects of the Maryland women's championship next week, as in the past in local affairs, she was an outstanding favorite, particularly over her home course. Her leaving the amatuer ranks takes a lot of punch out of the three-cornered rivalry—Dettweiler, Meckley and Brown, that have thrilled women's golf galleries since 1931. Now it'll be Dettweiler-Hicks-Hill and Didrickson.

Tigers Rout Nats, 5-1; Bridges Hurls

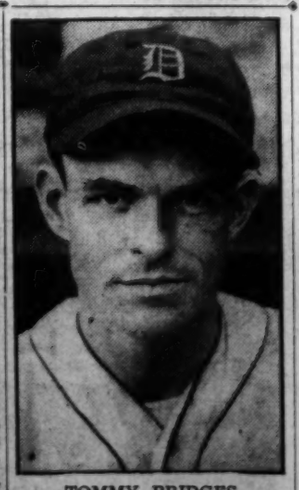

Errors Help Detroit Hand Griffmen 6th Straight Beating

wind-blown pop for an error, and then Wasdell produced a run with a single to right center. Bridges didn't like that so he upped and fanned Early and Krakauskas with two on base.

The Tigers had two out in the third inning when they proceeded to tie the score at 1-1. Barney McCosky, home-town flash of the Tigers, rapped a single into right-field and then Krakauskas lost his bearings, walking Laabs and Gehringer to fill the bases. At which point, Buddy Lewis unfortunately took charge for the Nats. Grabbing Greenberg's grounder, Lewis disdained a throw to first for the third out, and elected to race Laabs to third base for a force-out. He lost the race, and all hands were safe, with McCosky scoring.

Krakauskas got out of the inning by fanning York with the bases still loaded, but in the next he was waist-deep in trouble. He pitched a two-bagger to Pete Fox, and then he threw a centerfield single to Croucher. Fox, slow to break on the hit, virtually stopped at third base, but when he saw George Case juggle the ball for an error, he raced home. Then on Bridges' grounder, Myer tried a fancy backhand flip to Travis for a force-play and the throw was wide, putting two on base. A pair of singles by McCosky and Laabs drove over the second and third runs of the inning and set the Tigers in a 4-1 lead.

TOMMY BRIDGES

The Tigers got their fifth run in the seventh, very simply. York simply doubled to left and Fox simply singled, and presto—there it was. The only inning in which the Tigers didn't get a hit was the eighth when Bud Thomas was pitching.

From the second until the eighth, the Nats made only one hit against the curve balling Bridges—Case's useless single in the sixth. Case rendered it completely useless by rounding second base on Travis' fly to center on the theory that three were already out. The Tigers knew that there were only two out, so they doubled Case before he could retrace his steps to first.

The Nats had only one chance to get back in the ball game. That was in the eighth inning when a pair of singles by Wasdell and Early, and a walk to Lewis filled the bases with two out. But Travis obligingly grounded to Greenberg.

Sir Damion Wins $20,000 Dixie Handicap at Pimlico

Leads Field All the Way To Finish

Tatterdemalion 2nd, 2½ Lengths Behind; Jacola Runs Third; Meade Rides Winner

Pimlico, Md., May 10.—Streaking to the front in the first 20 yards and holding the lead throughout under a hustling ride by Jockey Don Meade, Marshall Field's Sir Damion tied the $20,000 Dixie Handicap field in knots today as 18,000 fans watched. After his rivals had shot their best speed guns at him throughout the mile and three sixteenths, the gallant son of Sir Gallahad III came to the finish line two and a half lengths in advance of Thomas J. Healey's Tatterdemalion and an additional length in front of Edward Friendly's Jacola.

Forced out of the pay-off circle, came 11 others of the first flight stake company in a race first contested in 1870 and worth $22,025 to the winner.

Jockey Meade was riding out his first program in Maryland in more than two years. He was given a mild "hand" as he went to the post in the first race and an ovation when he returned to the unsaddling ring after the stake triumph.

Making his first start since he was second to Bull Lea in the $50,000 Widener at Hialeah last winter, Sir Damion won his fifth race of the year and brought his 1939 earnings to $32,500. In addition, he added his name to those of Equipoise, Mike Hall, Sarazen and other Dixie winners.

Sir Damion ran over a fast but slightly dull track and turned in time of 1:58 3-5, well off the record of 1:56 4-5 set by Pompoon in winning last year's renewal. Pompoon was prominent to the stretch today and tired to finish far back.

Meade never let up on Sir Damion from the first tingle of the starting bell. The 5-year-old came out of the starting gate in fourth position but Meade's yellow blouse was in front after the opening scramble for positions. Once in the clear, Meade pumped away in the manner that brought him from saddle obscurity to the top ranks of his profession.

Going into the backstretch, Thanksgiving, Jacola and Pompoon were forming a team behind the flying Sir Damion. The remainder of the field was strung out until it resembled a camel caravan. At the far turn the same three were doing the chief chasing and they had moved up until they were even with Sir Damion's saddle cloth.

Approaching the stretch, Sir Damion came in for the only hard test of the race. Pompoon made his bid and only Sir Damion's neck was in front of him. Meade increased the cadence of his riding and again Sir Damion drew out as Pompoon gave up and slid back into the struggling group coming forward.

Hollywood Horses Try Out New Starting Gate

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

—At The Post

Pimlico, Md., May 10.—
Dear Al:

Jimmy Stewart was the winner of the trainer's race held this morning, but his rivals are trying to start an investigation. The race was for stable ponies and Stewart's mount was later identified as Black Watch, a race horse. The real hero of the test was Yancey Christmas, who finished second. Stewart was unable to pull up his horse after the race and Christmas caught him in approved outrider style. Accidental, John Manfuso's filly who won here on the Tuesday program, is one of the smallest horses in training. She always has won the close ones, however, and she must have a heart the size of a watermelon. In answer to inquiry: There is no extra charge for the paddock here. I understand the Maryland Jockey Club has applied to the Maryland Racing Commission for a change in the rule which makes the track pay at least a $2.10 mutuel. The officials anticipate a heavy place and show pool on the Preakness that might bring the mutuel price so low that the track would have to dig down and lose some money. In the event that the track is unable to get a smaller than "5 cents on the dollar" pay-off, it is likely that the Preakness, with a small starting field, will not have any show betting. Clocker Mike is touting Ciencia for the Preakness. I understand somebody is just finding out that El Chico is out of the Preakness. Why he was out of the Preakness, and the Derby, too, for that matter, when the field reached the first turn at Louisville last Saturday. They don't scratch horses here any more. They are "declared out." Pass the sugar—two lumps. And, of course, "claim of foul" is known as an "objection." But the boys over in the grandstand still say, "I give him two winners" and "Who win?" There is no truth in the rumor that Italian Harry will be an added starter in the Preakness. BILL.

First race—Son Altesse is a son of the imported Kantar out of the good stake mare, Her Grace. He makes his first start today, is Bedwell trained and should be fit. Good Reception was second to Scorch Tuesday and, having proved his wares will be the one to beat. Knightfors for show.

Second race—Gossip Time, also a first-time starter, is reported to have plenty of speed, and Trainer Christmas has pointed him for this. Plot, second to Predestined last week, has shown speed and consistency in recent races. Special Racket raced well with good company last year, but may need a race.

Third race—The Montpelier entry of Slievereigh and Muskogee will be hard to beat in this event. Slievereigh beat good ones when second to Hop last start. Muskogee has class and has been training well. Stars and Stripes II fell in his only start here, should redeem himself today. Paper Moon for show.

Fourth race—Gerald has been outclassed in recent races, but should prove best of these platers. His best recent effort was his second to Kenty at Havre. Ocean Roll is also one who is dropping down from the handicap ranks. His last behind Heelfly, Wednesday, was unimpressive, but he should go well here. Yellow Tulip is dangerous.

Fifth race—Early Morn performed successfully in stakes in Florida this winter with such as Technician and Heather Time. With Meade riding, she looks like a good bet. Post Luck was short in his first outing this year, has speed, and should stick it out for second place. Grand Pageant is in rare form and should show.

Sixth race—Lady Maryland came from behind to nip Rehearsal at the final nod when they met Saturday. They meet again under identical conditions and Lady Maryland figures to repeat her winning performance. Rehearsal tired in that race; may stick it out today. Double Back has speed, but may be outmatched.

Seventh race—Longful was installed favorite over slightly better company in her first start of the season, but failed to threaten. She should improve with that race under her belt. Last Scamp showed good effort behind Match Point and figures best of the others. Nancy Mae can better poor recent races.

Eighth race—New Deal displayed good speed to whip platers of this last outing and should make it two in a row. Mantagna won his last by himself, but his time was poor. Bit by Bit was favorite and finished second in the race with the top one and could take it all.

SIR DAMION, off in first flight and steadied along after getting to front in run to first turn, drew clear of THANKSGIVING, withstood a challenge from POMPOON approaching stretch and drew out to hold TATTERDEMALION safe in final stages. The latter, off slowly, improved his position at once, was rated on outside to far turn, came wide for racing room while moving up and finished under punishment in middle of track. JACOLA, keen forward factor from start, came willingly in closing test after being in close quarters entering straightaway. THANKSGIVING saved ground while closest to pace of SIR DAMION for half and was weakening under pressure at end.

SCORIA lacked early speed, improved position readily when placed to drive leaving backstretch while racing wide, withstood a long drive to be up in concluding strides. PINE TAG was outrun for half, moved into command boldly in midstretch and continued gamely, but was unable to resist winner. AIR EDDY, last away, improved position steadily and closed with good energy.

Coal Strike Held Factor In Steel Drop

21 Blast Furnaces Closed in April and 10 So Far This Month

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—The coal strike was blamed today by Iron Age, steel industry publication, for part of the slackening in steel operations. It reported: "A decline of 8 points in ingot production in the Pittsburgh district, together with minor reductions at Chicago and Buffalo, has brought down the rate for the industry as a whole to 47 per cent from an estimated 49 per cent for last week.

"On top of a net loss of 21 active blast furnaces in April, there has been a reduction of ten furnances so far this month. Of these, three are in the Pittsburgh district, three in the Chicago district, two in the Birmingham district, one at Cleveland and one at Buffalo. "Some of the stacks were banked and some were blown out. United States Steel units account for six of the idle furnaces.

"Reduction in output of steel and pig iron has been dictated partly by a smaller demand for steel and partly by efforts to conserve coal and coke in the event that the coal miners' strike is not quickly ended.

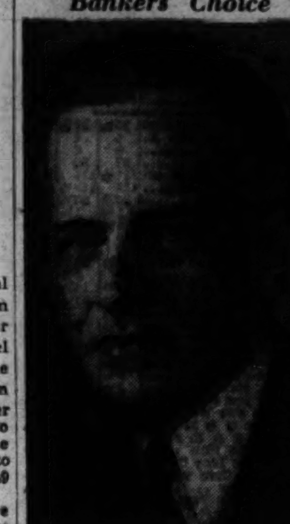

Shipments Held Up.

"In a good many instances, steel customers have held up shipments of steel from the mills in evident fear that their own operations may be curtailed by coal shortage. Routine buying of materials by railroads for car repairs has virtually ceased.

"The downward trend in steel production, automobile assemblies and carloadings in particular has brought the ninth consecutive weekly decline in the Iron Age capital goods index, which for this week stands at 59.2 against 76.4 in the week of March 4. The index figure for the comparable week in 1938 was 47.4.

"Despite the absence of important scrap buying by domestic mills, there have been no further important declines in prices. The Iron Age scrap composite price is unchanged at $14.25."

Buying of May Lifts Wheat To New Highs

Unfavorable Reports On Crops and Dust Storms Aid Advance

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 10.—Heavy buying of May wheat contracts, unfavorable weather and crop reports, and dust storms in the Southwest, caused wheat prices to rise sharply at times today to new high levels in almost a year.

May wheat rose as much as 2⅜ cents to a peak of 78¾. No wheat has been delivered as yet on May options, in which trading will cease in about two weeks, and contracts involving almost 8,000,000 bushels remain to be settled by the end of the month either through delivery or pit operations. Traders estimated supplies of deliverable wheat here at around 2,000,000 bushels.

July and September wheat fluctuated within about 1 cent range, dipping as much as ⅝ cent below yesterday's close at times and rising to 74⅞ and 74⅝, respectively, to new highs for the season. Thus, with profit-taking active, the wheat market had an irregular close, prices finishing ⅛ to 1⅞ higher than yesterday; May, 78⅛@78¼; July, 74¼@78⅛; September, 74⅛@74.

Corn closed ⅛@½ higher; July, 51¼@51⅜; September, 52¼@52⅜; oats, ¼@½ up; rye, ⅝@1 up; lard, 3 higher to 5 lower.

The tight situation in May wheat, due largely to continued good demand from milling interests and premiums of several cents quoted for actual grain over the futures, was a disturbing factor in the trade. Shippers sold 20,000 bushels to mills and spot wheat was quoted 1½ to 2 cents higher, with No. 2 yellow hard at 80½, or 2⅜ over the May close. Board of Trade investigation of purchasing of warehouse receipts on grain in store here for future delivery also attracted attention. The May wheat prices has risen about 10 cents in the past two weeks.

Prices Lower at Close After Strong Start Steels and Coppers Yield to Selling Some Treasury Bonds at New Highs

New York, May 10.—Share prices made a strong start today on increased volume but around mid-day settled back. There was a gradual decline in the afternoon to a close fractionally under Tuesday's last levels. The composite for the 100 key stocks ended 0.18 point lower due principally to the setback in steels and coppers. Stores finished with small gains. Turnover totaled 692,290 shares.

In the bond section prices held steady with speculative rail liens inclined to gain rather sharply. Six of the listed Treasuries were at new highs. Foreign exchanges were dull and featureless. Some more gold was engaged on the other side. Wheat went into new high ground for about a year but gave up some of the advance, closing ⅛ to 1⅞ cent higher. Cotton sold off 3 to 13 points.

While domestic business news was negative, it was unlikely that it induced any selling although it kept timid ones in the trading crowd on the fence. Copper shares ignored the development of a strong buying movement for the metal in which sellers satisfied the largest demand in some time without altering the domestic quotation on refined.

In the steel field, the report of April deliveries by the largest interest was quite a bit better than most observers had anticipated. On a daily basis the shipments of finished products last month were only seven-tenths of 1 per cent under the March level. Due to one less working day in April than in March, however, total shipments were off between 66,000 and 67,000 tons.

Steel Decline

Iron Age, however, did not give much encouragement to the view that a pick-up in capital goods industries is imminent now that the European picture is brighter. The magazine reported the ninth consecutive decline in its index of capital goods activity which reached a level of 59.2 against 76.4 at the beginning of March, or a 17.2 point drop. It cited, however, as favorable factors, reduced inventories of consumers as well as of producers, betterment in tinplate and the fact that orders, while small, are numerous.

Leaders in the motor division showed rather substantial losses, including ⅞ to Chrysler, the day's leader, and 1⅜ for General Motors. Automobile assemblies, down rather sharply last week, are now expected to recede until production of the 1940 models gets under way.

Shares which finished one or more points down included American Smelting, United States Rubber, Steel common, Bethlehem, du Pont, Westinghouse and G. L. Martin. Union Pacific ended a point higher in a rather dull rail section, where Southern Railway, in active trading, improved a small fraction. Paramount did rather well, aided by overnight announcement of its first dividend since reorganization, closed at 9¼, up ¼. AGWI also put on a little flurry on its report showing net of about $80,000 for the first quarter, against a large loss in the like 1938 period. It closed a point up at 7½.

Some of the senior stocks showed rather large price swings, as they have all along in thin markets. Wesson convertible preferred was up 2⅝; Safeway Stores preferred added 2, Spalding preferred 2 and preferreds of Pacific Telephone 3, Deere, Loew's, Spiegel and a number of others a point and upward, Federal Mining & Smelting common added 3½ and Eastman Kodak 2¼.

Bonds Continue Advance

Pricse of listed bonds again tended to advance today, but the turnover of $8,330,000 indicated that business still is far under normal. Long-term United States Treasury bonds moved once again into fresh high ground, and some records were established among corporate issues as well. Speculative issues in both the domestic and foreign sections were in modest demand.

The market buzzed with talk of the Commonwealth Edison Co. private placement of $114,500,000 40-year 3¼s with 15 insurance companies. This financing was criticized sharply in all quarters, both from the strictly Wall Street angle and also from the viewpoint of the general investment interest. It was noted particularly that the flotation will mean a further concentration of best-grade obligations in a few institutional hands.

The advance in Treasury issues resulted in gains of 1/32 to 23/32 point among the long bonds. Six issues marched into record high territory. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were better. Some of the telephone bonds set new records, and various power and light issues also touched further highs. The Commonwealth Edison 4s and 3¾s to be refunded were marked down to a money market basis. Best rails and industrials were steady.

Medium-priced carrier liens failed to attract much attention, but the small purchases resulted in gains owing to the thinness of the market. Borderline and default rails also were good. Local traction issues were idle and unchanged. Alleghany Corporation bonds were uncertain, and utility holding issues were dull. International Telephone bonds remained quiet, despite assurances that Spanish losses are small.

Argentine bonds were higher in the foreign section, owing to the renewed buying of commodities in that country. Canadian and Australian loans did well, and there was some buying of Scandinavians and Belgians. Polish bonds continued their improvement, and some interest also was taken in Italian and German issues. Latin-American default bonds were quiet and mostly firm.

Wheat Crop Under Need of Referendum

By the Associated Press.

An official forecast of a 543,928,000-bushel winter wheat crop indicated, farm officials said yesterday, that a grower referendum on wheat marketing quotas next season would be unnecessary. The forecast was made in the afternoon by the Crop Reporting Board. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace must announce within five days whether a referendum will be ordered.

The 1938 farm act requires such a referendum when prospective supplies exceed a normal year's domestic and export needs by more than 35 per cent. Officials have indicated that a supply of about 1,025,000,000 bushels or more probably would make a referendum necessary.

9,000,000 Bushels Short

The winter wheat estimate, added to an indicated surplus of 275,000,000 bushels from previous years and a prospective spring wheat crop of about 200,000,000 bushels, would give a total supply of 1,018,928,000 bushels—or more than 9,000,000 bushels short of the level calling for a referendum.

Quotas are designed to keep price-depressing surpluses off the market. They would have to be approved by two-thirds of the farmers voting. Growers selling in excess of their quotas would be subject to a penalty tax of 15 cents a bushel.

The reduction from last year's crop reflected, the board said, a seeded acreage 21.7 per cent below 1938. Because of a heavy surplus from last year, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration had offered growers a subsidy of 28 cents a Bushel for making a sharp reduction in their planting operations.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority reported yesterday that the Nation's airlines in 1938 set records for the number of miles flown and passengers and express carried.

Air express totaled 9,452,600 pounds, an increase of 5.22 per cent. The authority said 345 airplanes were in operation on scheduled airlines at the end of 1938.

8½ Barrels of Oil Per Person a Year Consumed in U. S.

New York, May 10.—In the past two decades per capita consumption of petroleum products in this country has doubled, according to a statement today by H. D. Frueauff, vice president of the Cities Service Oil Co., in which he outlined the highlights of the petroleum industry exhibition at the New York World's Fair.

"In any enumeration of the factors that have made for America's leadership in practically every branch of industrial life," Mr. Frueauff said, "our pre-eminence in production and consumption of oil belongs near the top of the list. Every person in the United States uses on the average about 8½ barrels of petroleum products a year, which is more than double the per capita consumption in Canada, the second ranking country, five times the figure for Great Britain, and eight times the figure for France.

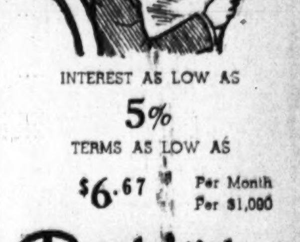

"The capacity of all engines using petroleum fuels in the United States is estimated to be nearly 1¾ billion horse-ower—which is another way of saying that petroleum is instrumental in supplying every gainfully employed person in the country with 35 helpers. About 85 per cent of this power is developed by motor vehicles and the remainder is used in manufacturing, electric power and lighting, farm tractors and achinery, and the like. And petroleum is the source of over one-third the mechanical energy produced in the United States.

Record Wages Called Bar to Lower Taxes

Factory Pay Mounts To Higher Rate Than In Boom Year 1929

New York, May 10.—The chief obstacle to a curtailment of Federal expenditures by an amount sufficient not only to balance the budget but to permit a reduction in taxes is the present high level of factory wage rates, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. Factory wage rates are at the highest level on record, exceeding even the amount paid in 1929, when the national income was much larger than it is at the present time. In 1938, for instance, factory wage rates averaged 64.6 cents per hour, as compared with 58.7 cents in 1929.

When factory wage rates are too high in relation to the national income, it is necessary to keep the price of manufactured goods at such a high level that the demand is curtailed. The consequent reduction in factory output tends to keep down factory employment despite the shortening of working hours as an offset. The Government is thus called upon to spend money on relief for unemployed factory workers.

How the Cycle Works

Furthermore, curtailment of factory output means a smaller distribution of manufactured goods. This reduces employment on the railroads and also cuts down wholesale and retail trade employment. The necessity of providing relief for these unemployed further increases the Government's expenditures.

Finally, curtailment of factory output reduces the consumption of raw materials and depresses the prices of such materials. This makes for a further increase in Government expenditures, since the Government feels that under such circumstances, it must subsidize raw material producers, such as the farmers.

It consequently follows that, if factory wage rates were reduced to the proper level, employment would increase and thus lighten the Government's relief burden. Moreover, it would make for a greater demand for raw materials and the Government would find it unnecessary to provide so much aid to the farmers.

Int. Nickel Profit In Quarter Tops Preceding Period

New York, May 10 (AP).—International Nickel Co. of Canada reported today for the March quarter net profit of $9,547,300, equal to 62 cents a common share. This compared with $8,115,095, or 53 cents a share in the final quarter of 1938 and with $10,113,764, or 66 cents a share in the first quarter of 1938.

New York Central

New York Central Railroad in 1938, despite a $6,150,134 increase in wage payments and other new costs, pared its operating expenses to $237,502,383, a drop of $46,498,056, the road's annual report disclosed today.

Major reductions included a $19,901,513 decrease in maintenance of equipment, a $16,205,021 drop in transportation expenses, and an $8,130,285 cut in maintenance of way and structures.

As previously reported, the road for 1938 had net loss of $20,154,357 after taxes and charges, against net income of $6,352,612, equal to 99 cents a common share in 1937.

Paramount Dividend

Directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc. have voted a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, the first distributed since reorganization in 1935. The dividend is payable July 15 to stock of record June 30.

Studebaker Sales

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—The Studebaker Corporation of South Bend, Ind., today reported factory sales of 10,974 passenger cars and trucks in April, exceeding factory sales in the entire second quarter last year. Factory sales for the first four months this year were 30,720 and compared with 14,126 in the same 1938 period.

Commodity Trading Policy Submitted

New York, May 10.—The following recommendations as to purchasing policy for various important commodities are made by the Standard Statistics Co. of New York:

Advance purchases justified at present levels:—Anthracite and bituminous coal, burlap, cement, cheese, copper, gasoline, hides, lubricating oil, paraffin, rubber, sugar, tin.

Cotton Declines Reduce Advances Of Past Few Days

New York, May 10 (AP).—Cotton futures ran into a general selling movement today that swept away part of recent substantial gains. Offerings came into the ring, traders said, following reports that fair quantities of cotton were being repossessed from Government loan stocks. (Old crop cotton deliveries have been forced up recently due to difficulty in obtaining certain grades of the staple for immediate delivery.)

Selling stemmed chiefly from New Orleans and the South. This pressure, plus liquidation of straddles by foreign interests, forced prices as much as 11 to 15 points lower at one time. Short covering and fair outside demand rallied the market later in the day.

Virginia Industries Set Records in 1937

Richmond Va., May 10.—Virginia census data for 1937 which have just become available show that Virginia manufacturing industries in that year employed more wage earners, paid more wages, turned out a greater value of products, and added more value through the manufacturing processes than in any previous census year.

These facts and a number of other interesting and significant comparisons are reported in an analysis of United States Bureau of the Census data released today by the research department of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Associated Gas Output Up 9:5%

New York, May 10.—Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 382,577,858 units for April, an increase of 33,044,618 units, or 9.5 per cent, above production of 349,5 240 units a year ago.

Production for the 12 months ended April 30 was 4,709,820,176 units, 114,782,212 units or 2.5 per cent above the corresponding period the year before.

Investors Unhurt By Holding Act, Banker Declares

New York, May 10 (AP).—Harry P. Gifford, of Salem, Mass., today told the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks that their committee on public utilities, of which he is chairman, had found after a study that the holding company act has not worked harm to investors. He said:

"Following what appeared to be antagonism in the relationship between the Administration and the utilities, particularly the power companies, there now seems to be at least some degree of understanding.

"The Securities and Exchange and Federal Power commissions have proceeded to exercise their powers under the holding company act with respect to individual companies. As far as your committee has been able to determine up to this time the administration of this act has not been detrimental to investors of operating companies and we have no recommendation to make with respect thereto."

Gifford said, however, that "the Tennessee Valley Authority continues to expand and is becoming more and more a problem for private power utilities operating in the same general territory."

Steel Shipments Ahead of Last Year

New York, May 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiaries during April totaled 701,459 tons, a decline of 66,451 from March. In April last year they totaled 501,972 tons.

For the first four months of 1939 shipments totaled 2,936,668 tons, compared with 2,067,216 in the comparable 1938 period, an increase of 869,452 tons.

Pit Seeks to Curb Outside Dealings

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—The Board of Trade took steps today to curb dealings in grain for future delivery outside of the regular futures market.

This type of operation, involving purchase or sale of warehouse receipts on grain in store here for future delivery, could be regarded, exchange officials said, as an effort to save commission charges in the futures pit or as a possible development to circumvent exchange and Government regulations requiring reporting of market transactions.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, May 10 (AP).—Favorable British trade indices, easing international political tension and improvement in Wall street, attracted broader demand in the stock market today. British funds closed higher and industrials advanced, with tobacco, motor and brewery issues most prominent. Excellent steel output figures helped metal shares and rubbers also were firm. Railroad issues reacted sharply on disappointing traffic receipts. Foreign bonds and trans-Atlantics finished higher.

Paris.—The bourse closed generally steady today. Rentes ended 10 centimes down to 50 up. Bank of France gained 70 francs and Suez Canal was up 170. Royal Dutch also moved forward.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed unchanged to ⅝d higher today. Slow demand by millers was offset by adverse weather and crop reports from the American Southwest and Canada. Trade buying and covering appeared in near month cotton futures despite fears of an imminent export subsidy for American cotton. Final prices were unchanged to three points higher.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, May 10 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—A fair demand was being received on graded territory wools today.

Some of the business was on spot wools, but a considerable portion was on wools to be graded and delivered when available. Combing three-eighths blood territory wools were bringing prices ranging 57 to 60 cents, scoured basis, little difference being apparent between spot prices and prices for future delivery in wools of this grade. Graded combing quarter blood territory wools brought 53 to 55 cents, scoured basis. Average combing, including French and staple combing length half blood territory wools, brought 65 to 67 cents, scoured basis, for spot offerings and 63 to 64 cents, scoured basis, for future delivery.

Rukeyser Says: Appeasement Of Business Stubs Its Toe

International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, May 10.—Business appeasement appears to have struck a snag. As the weeks have gone by, there is less enthusiasm for promoting an era of good feeling between Government and business.

As a spokesman for the Administration, Secretary Hopkins indicated dissatisfaction with the tone of the resolutions adopted on belief of business last week by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

A keen Washington observer reports: "In January-February, the style of talk inspired by the White House was of 'business appeasement,' 'No new reforms,' and 'easing up' . . . the further-reformers, known as left-wingers, were put in the background.

"Now, in May, the left-wing advisers are again in control of the Presidential strategy, and the others are in the background . . . This shift has occurred while the news was about war abroad."

If there has been any shift of emphasis, it probably reflects dissatisfaction in both business and Government camps with the recent course of economic events. Tangible business results have been disappointing.

Harmony Is Vital

It seems to me that everything is to be gained by stressing harmony, rather than conflict between Government and business. There needs to be a scientific examination of the barriers to a free movement of goods and services through the arteries of the home economy.

Politics as such may have been overstressed. A business-like analysis on the other hand, would show that the weakness in commodity prices tends to accentuate the maladjustments and disparities which spell subnormal business and subnormal employment.

Instead of prolonging the vicissitudes of shadow boxing, there should be a sincere effort made at nonpartisan diagnosis of our economic disturbances. Once there is an understanding of the causes, the sound remedies will become self evident.

As far as the expressions of national business organizations are concerned, they should seek to articulate their recommendations in terms of general public welfare. For in our delicately adjusted national economy under the power age, it is becoming increasingly true that what is good for the country is good for business. In other words, any steps to balance the national economy will inevitably result in an expansion of business volume and profits.

Perhaps the criticism might be made of the Chamber of Commerce resolutions that they were not couched sufficiently in terms of the greatest good for the greatest number. This involves more the question of their spirit than their technical content.

Industrial Platform

Last autumn, when the platform for industry was drawn up at the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, there was a more conscious effort to give expression to the social implications of business. In its preamble that platform stated: "Better living standards for 130,000,000 Americans result from the increasing production of goods by American manufacturers. Our Nation progresses as industry stimulates the natural desire of people for its products and makes those products available to increasing numbers. When this happens, factories prosper. When factories prosper—America prospers."

Unless some such attempt is made to translate the recommendations of industry into terms of a "more abundant life" for the masses, business muffs the psychological ball. On the other hand, by identifying its sincere proposals with a formula for increasing the material well-being of the people, business puts its best foot forward and enlarges its circle of friends.

But, irrespective of the technique of public relations, Government must have a due regard for the condition of its financial supporters, the taxpayers. Business expansion will relieve Government of the abnormal expense of carrying on relief rolls millions who could, by a revival of prosperity, be transferred to the pay rolls of business enterprises. Thus, in the long run, co-operation between Government and Business to foster recovery becomes an economic necessity.

2 Men Killed As Truck Dives Off Va. Span

Road Worker, Struck By Swerving Car, Is One of Victims

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 10.—Two men were killed and another injured when a northbound truck left Route 1 five miles north of here this afternoon, crashed through the rail of Potomac Run Bridge and dived into the bank of the stream.

William John Truitt, 32, Georgetown, Del., and Gwinn Raines, 52, Stafford, Va., were killed. Houston Combs, 25, Del Glade, Fla., was slightly hurt.

The other dead man, one of the truck drivers, was extricated from the wreckage a half hour after the accident. He was in the sleeping compartment. The driver was brought to Mary Washington Hospital here.

Truck Crash at Stafford Kills Two

Swerving to avoid hitting an auto, this truck crashed through a cement bridge rail at Stafford, Va., yesterday, killed a Virginia State highway employe and an occupant of the truck, and injured the driver. The dead were Gwinn Raines, 52, highway worker, and William John Truit, 32, relief driver, of Bel Grade, Fla.; Houston Combs, 25, driver, also of Bel Grade, was only slightly injured. The truck was left standing on end

Reich Export And Import Values Drop

Quarter's Prices Lower, Volume Higher, Report Stresses

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 10.—Imports for the first quarter of 1939 exceeded exports by $10,800,000 in old Germany, figures published today showed.

Total imports for the old Reich for the quarter amounted to 515,760,000, or 6.8 per cent less than in the corresponding period of 1938. Exports were $504,960,000, a decrease of 5.7 per cent.

The report stated, however, that a fall in market prices influenced the figures and that the volume of both imports and exports increased slightly over the same period of last year.

It was noted especially that imports from southeast Europe increased 6.1 per cent. Exports to that region increased 40.7 per cent, but it was pointed out that this was due "to a large extent" to annexation of the Sudetenland by Germany.

Imports from Britain decreased about 9 per cent, while exports to Britain dropped about 25 per cent. Imports from the United States were reported at $26,000,000 and exports to the United States at $15,160,000.

A "considerable decrease" in imports from the United States was noted, but no comparison or breakdown of figures was given.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

IF WORLD'S FAIR officials have that 15-foot statute of Lincoln splitting rails hiding somewhere, it's time they came out and said so, thinks Edward Bruce, chief of the Fine Arts Section of the Procurement Division.

Since the statue was reported destroyed because United States Commissioner Edward Flynn failed to like its looks, rumors that it might be hidden somewhere have continued to circulate among persons who don't believe Flynn "would dare."

Bruce, however, thinks the statue has been completely destroyed—and is not willing to let the matter just drop. Thinks he would be failing American artists if he shut up, as Flynn no doubt would like to think he would.

Few, if any, press department in the Government works harder and more prolifically than that which heralds the doings of the National Labor Relations Board.

From almost any other agency, a 100-page "release" is something that comes only at annual report time. For NLRB it's getting to be frequent. The last was on Monday and summarized the board's report on seven House bills.

Regular meetings of Treasury Local No. 262, National Federation of Federal Employes, will be discontinued during July, August and September, it was announced yesterday. The executive committee will act for the union until meetings are resumed the second Monday in October.

Daniel M. Goodacre, chief of emergency claims in the United States Employes Compensation Commission, and past commander of Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13, of the American Legion, has been endorsed by his post as candidate for department commander. He has served in several offices in the post, and now is department adjutant in the District.

Glimpses of more than 100 Federal agencies at work will be given in a new radio program by the Office of Education in co-operation with Columbia Broadcasting System. Thirteen weekly programs, under the title "Democracy in Action" will be presented, starting May 14, to dramatize the Federal exhibits at the New York World's Fair.

Commissioner Studebaker said the purpose of the series would be to promote wider understanding of the democratic process as revealed by the ways the American Government operates, and to extend the value of the Federal fair exhibits. The opening program will cover transportation, and later topics include communication, conservation, trade, finance and credit, education and recreation, internal protection, and national defense. The series follows the "Americans All—Immigrants All" program, and will go on the air Sundays from 2 p. m. to 2:30 p. m.

Dr. Paul Bartsch, of the Natural History Museum will lead a bird trip from the Virginia end of Key Bridge along the Memorial Parkway, through parts of Arlington Cemetery, to Roaches run, from 7 a. m. to 8:30 a. m. Sunday. Buses will leave 1416 F street northwest at 6:30 a. m. Donald Edward Henry, park naturalist, will lead a trip through Fort Dupont Park starting at 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

Technical staff assignments to the Washington office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, announced under the decentralization program, follow:

George W. Feidt, assistant head of division; William J. Hollman, Adrian R. Miller, Frank A. Linsel, assistant technical advisors; Christian A. Manning, head accountant and auditor; Katherine B. Kelly, Wallace M. Earle, senior accountant auditors; Lillian S. Harper, assistant accountant and auditor; Mary C. Hurney, Elsie I. Evans, clerk-stenographers; Agnes G. O'Brien, Theodora R. Clark, assistant clerk-stenographers; Mary B. Greene, clerk; Amanda M. Humphries, assistant clerk, Vada H. Potthoff, junior clerk-typist; Ulysses S. Pomper, messenger, and Thelma Grock, camptometer operator.

Philip A. Bayer, Lloyd W. Creason, Elmer L. Corbin, assistant counsel; Phoebe D. Charles, Clara P. Bush, Thelma L. Stokes, Bertha D. Shenk, secretaries.

Bob Burns Says—

Everytime I get to thinking about man's inhumanity to man, I just sorta choke up. The same goes for woman's inhumanity to man, too. I guess if all the males who've ever been mistreated by women were laid end to end, each one of 'em would rise up and say, "Yes, dear."

Uncle Hod's boy, Dud, came home from school cryin' not long ago. He said, "Poppa, that teacher's all the time pickin' on me!"

Well, that made Hod mighty angry. He grabbed the boy and they both went down to the public school. Then Hod said to the teacher, "Look here, woman, how come you keep pickin' on my little boy?"

She said, "I haven't been picking on him. He merely became aggravated when I tried to make him catch up with the rest of the class; like this: 'Dud, how much is two and two?'"

Listen to Bob Burns tonight on WRC—between 9 P. M. and 10 P. M.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The Olympic deals, played by thousands of bridge enthusiasts in all parts of the world last week, provided great excitement to at least twenty-one contestants in the game run by Mrs. Elizabeth Banfield and Ralph Musham at their Bridge Center.

The "mystery" hands, dealt by Grover Whalen and slyly injected by the Olympic committee among the sixteen prepared hands, proved upsetting. Not knowing whether the next hand would be a "mystery" deal or whether it would be one of the set hands which required superhuman effort to fulfill, the players were in a state of consternation throughout the match.

We moseyed around to the Bridge Center the other day and picked up the results on some of the most interesting hands. The group was composed of social players; there was not an expert in the lot.

Olympic Replay

Here are three of the problems. Test your own bidding and play, then compare it with the results of the Banfield-Musham players:

Hand No. 1.

West	East
♠ Q 4	♠ A 6
♡ J 8 7 2	♡ A K Q 10 9 6 3
◇ 7 6 4 3 2	◇ A K J
♣ K Q	♣ A

This bidding is suggested by the Olympic committee:

North	East	South	West
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	7 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Play: South opens spade jack and the spade loser is bared. East wins and cashes heart ace, diamond ace, diamond king, club ace, and then puts West in with a trump to cash club king. Declarer must be careful to manage his trumps so as to have three entries to West. On club king, East discards diamond jack. West then leads diamond for East to ruff high. East puts West in again for another diamond lead and high ruff, and the last trump entry puts West in to cash the fifth diamond for a discard of East's spade six.

At the Bridge Center five pairs played the hand at six hearts, one played it at four hearts and one at seven no trump. Three declarers won twelve tricks. Three made the par play, winning thirteen tricks, and the declarer at seven no trump was set one trick.

Too Much Mystery

Hand No. 2 was a "mystery" deal which only one pair bid to the par contract. The results in the other cases were as mysterious as the deal itself

North-South par: Bid three no trump and win at least ten tricks: North-South vulnerable; East dealer:

NORTH
♠ K Q 8
♡ A J 9 7 4 3
◇ K J
♣ Q 9
SOUTH
♡ 6 2
◇ A 8 6
♣ K J 10 5

The Olympic bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	1NT	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	3NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

At Bridge Center, two declarers played the hand at four no trump and made ten tricks; one played it at three no trump, the par, and made ten tricks; one played it at two hearts and made nine tricks (East holds four hearts, including king and ten); one played it at five clubs and made nine tricks; one jumped off the dock at six spades and made eleven tricks; one played it at four spades and made nine tricks.

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

SYNOPSIS

Peg Patterson, an orphan from Virginia, works in the brokerage office of her godfather, Otto Nelson. Hewitt Gill, with whom Peg is in love and who apparently returns her affection, is a salesman in the office and ambitious for a partnership. At an auction of antique furniture, Peg meets Anthony Covington, State Department attache just home from the Orient. Later, while seeking to avoid him, she dashes into a garage just in time to see a woman fire a shot at a man.

Chapter IV

The noises of the city beat against Peg as she ran. She still couldn't believe what she had seen. "I'll wake up in a moment and realize that I dreamed it all . . ." But it wasn't a dream. It was—real.

Her feet stumbled as she climbed into a cab at the corner. She gave the number of her office building in a small panting voice and sank back on the seat, bracing herself, waiting for her pulse to quit its terrible threshing tumult.

She'd have to tell someone, of course. Immediately. The police, perhaps. She'd have to say, "I was hiding there in the garage and I saw . . ." And they'd say: "Why were you hiding, Miss Patterson? Are you sure you weren't hiding in that garage—with a gun in your hand?"

Peg's fingers shook in her lap. They wouldn't believe her, of course. You couldn't possibly expect anyone to believe such a flimsy, ridiculous story, no matter how true it was. And if they never found that old woman in the heavy black coat, the shabby hat with the faded flower drooping from the brim.

Startling Realization

Suddenly Peg jerked erect. Something . . . a memory, a revealing picture struggling for consciousness, a vague realization beating against her mind—something swept over her in a panic. What was she trying to remember? What was clamoring inside of her for recognition? And then she knew. That woman hadn't been an old woman. It was all clear now: a soft hand holding an automatic, a smooth, starkly white hand gleaming through shadows. Pink-tipped fingers and a gold ring with a serpent coiled around a glittering green stone. A very young hand. And a young body, too, that could run swiftly without effort. A young woman then who had tried, for some reason, to look old and a little shabby . . .

When Peg reached her office building she rushed into her office, closed the door behind her, leaned against it and contemplated the situation. She started toward Hewitt's door, fatigue dragging at her limbs.

"Hewitt . . ."

But Hewitt was not in his office. His desk was meticulously cleared off; his hat was not on the rack in his reception cubicle. She couldn't quite convince herself that Hewitt wasn't here when she needed him so desperately. That Mr. Nelson wasn't here, either.

Peg pushed her fair hair back with an exhausted gesture. She picked up the telephone on her desk and dialed Hewitt's number. There was no answer. She called the Munitions Building but an impersonal voice said that Lieut. Duncan Patterson was in conference. Her finger trembled as she dialed Mr. Nelson's number.

A butler said coolly: "Mr. Nelson's residence. No, Mr. Nelson isn't here . . . Just a moment, Miss Patterson. Mr. Nelson is coming in the door now." She could hear the butler say: "Miss Patterson for you, sir. Shall I plug in in the hall or do you prefer to take it in the library?" There was a little wait and then Mr. Nelson was listening to her wild rush of words, to her confused fantastic story.

He said, evenly: "You're scared, Peg. Your voice sounds as if it has been strung out in a thin wire. Don't be frightened, my dear. After all, you only saw a woman shoot. You didn't do it."

Then he said: "Now get yourself organized and tell me everything once more. You struck up an acquaintance with a man named Anthony Covington at the auction. You were trying to shake him, so you stepped into that open garage. Now go on from there, slowly . . ."

Peg repeated it all carefully. She was more composed now. Mr. Nelson was right, of course. She hadn't done anything; she had just seen something horrible and frightening . . .

"Everything's going to be all right, Peg," Mr. Nelson said finally. "Quit worrying and stewing. Get your mind on something else. I'm going to find out right away what this is all about and you'll hear from me later this evening. No, don't miss your night school, Peg. Do just what you usually do. And not a word of this to anyone, with special emphasis on Mehalle. Her idea of social decorum is as rigid as Victoria's for her court. She'd never understand that business about Anthony Covington. For that matter, neither do I. Letting a man pick you up. Bah!" And he hung up on his usual blustering note.

Trying to Forget

Peg put the telephone back in its cradle and began pacing around the room restlessly. But that wouldn't do. You couldn't go to pieces like this. You had to hold on somehow.

She sat down at her desk, forcing herself to think of other things as Mr. Nelson had suggested. She hadn't, she remembered, done her shorthand exercises for tonight. For a full five minutes she struggled with o-hooks and diphthongs but it wasn't any good. The pages of her stenographer's pad became a blur of little wiggles. And mixed up in the blur, somehow, was a shadowy garage and Anthony Covington's slow contagious smile and Mrs. Demarest Polk's bland expressionless face . . . "Tony, darling . . . Thalia returned to Washington today . . ."

Though Peg had never seen Thalia Polk, the dark beautiful daughter of the Western Senator was very clear in her mind. The newspapers had made Thalia Polk exquisitely real. A great many people in Washington knew Thalia without ever having seen her, just as Peg knew her. They knew that she had followed her debutante season with a spring and a summer of traveling. She had been in London, in Antibes, in Juan-les-Pins. They knew what liners carried her to Europe, what famous people she met and played with there and where they went and where they stayed and what they did. Tomorrow they would know that Thalia Polk was back in Washington. The newspapers would never let you forget Thalia Polk . . . not as long as her father was a Senator . . . not as long as there was a background of millions behind her.

Peg told herself desperately: "Hewitt's mine! He loves me now no matter what happened last year. She shan't come back and spoil it!" And was promptly ashamed of this pathetic little scarecrow of defiance which she had set up in her mind to foil that sneaking, ugly jealousy which had swept suddenly over her.

"Call Hewitt, you idiot! He's had time enough now to get back to his apartment. He's probably waiting for you to call him," an inner voice said to her.

A Message

Peg reached for the telephone, began to dial and suddenly withdrew her hand. Not until that moment had she seen the white envelope with her name on it, balanced against the inkstand. Her heart leaped at the sight of it, almost as if Hewitt had come out of the twilight shadows of the office and put his arms around her, had held her head against his breast, comforting her.

She slit the envelope with a paper knife, opened the carefully folded sheet and sat there feeling a little as if she were slipping through space. He wouldn't be able, Hewitt had written, to pick her up after business school tonight. He was driving over to Baltimore to see what could be done about those Granville bonds. He didn't expect to return until tomorrow morning, but he'd see Peg then. He had signed it, simply H.

It was nearly 8:30 when Peg dried her eyes, put on her hat and scarf and walked out of the office door toward the stenographers' domain. Her walk was steady now. In her tears she had found poise, had been able to set her lips in a cool and artless smile.

A typewriter was going in that wide white-walled outer office; a small black animal with its teeth chattering. Maizie Darton was huddled over it, a slight, almost frail blonde girl with no color under her skin, and yet something like determination in the hazel eyes that compelled attention.

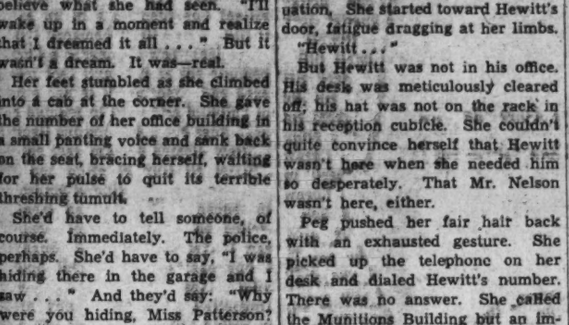

Peg stood there in silence for a moment, taken aback by the sudden realization that Hewitt was probably responsible for Maizie working overtime tonight. She thought, miserably: "Oh, Hewitt, how could you!" For, despite the fact Maizie was always bragging about weighing only 105 and that she could probably work right up to the last minute without any of Mr. Nelson's customers knowing, it was pitifully obvious that she was going to have a baby. And every one in the office knew that Don Darton was out of a job and that Maizie was almost sick with fear and worry.

Peg said quickly: "Anything I can do to help, Maizie?"

Drive Renewed For People's Vote on Wars

Congress Never Can Act Till Too Late, LaFollette Asserts

By the Associated Press.

A drive was begun in the Senate yesterday for legislation requiring that the American people must give consent in a referendum before American troops can be sent into action on foreign soil.

A judiciary subcommittee began hearings on this proposal, with Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, expressing his support in language that reminded many listeners of the night more than 20 years ago when his father and predecessor in the Senate spoke for hours against American entry into the World War.

Congress can act, La Follette said yesterday, only after the foreign policy of an Administration has led to a demand by the President for a declaration of war. Then it acts, he added, "with cheers, mixed with epithets and howls of question against those few men who may oppose" declaring war.

Only minor changes in the wording distinguished the referendum proposal from the Ludlow amendment to the Constitution, which was defeated in the House last year by only 11 votes.

La Follette said that if, as Administration spokesmen contend, their policy of helpfulness to Great Britain in the present European situation holds no likelihood of taking America into a European war, they should support referendum proposal, for it would "buttress" their position.

"There is nothing in the pending proposal," he said, "which will cripple any President in his conduct of our foreign policy so long as that policy is not to be implemented in the end by involving this Nation in an offensive war overseas.

Two other witnesses urged approval of the plan. They were Morris L. Ernst, New York attorney, and Rose Wilder Lane, author.
